Pro Talk

Before you go any further, "STOP"! And if you are not interested in sports, if you do not enjoy the "happiness of winning" and "sharing in the miseries of defeat", then there is not reason, whatsoever, in you reading this section of the paper, because this is what SPORTS is all about.

There is always the same question, that is confronted by every Coach and player at one time or another; "Is it worth all the hard work you put into each game?" In other words, "Why do the football players try to knock each others heads off just to score the most "points", why do the basketball players continuously run back and forth trying to score more "points" than the other team?" "Is it that important for the baseball teams too score more "runs" than their opponents?" And why do the tennis and golf players practice every free hour to outwit their opponent, and win the "match"? Points, runs, or matches they are all after one goal, and that is to win. They want to win, they thrive to win. But win or lose! It is all in "How you play the game". This is what ticks in the mind's of every athlete that even cares about his team. He not only wants to win, for the sake of winning, but he wants everything that he's got to go along with it. Any person can hold that chest out and that head up when he wins, but it takes an "athlete" to hold up that head when defeated.

'People' in the Nursing Dept.

Students entering the Nursing Department are often surprised at the number of new friends they encounter. These friendships are enduring because of the unique characteristics possessed by these "people".

Early in the program, they are introduced to Jethro, the skeleton. He emerges from his hibernating cabinet with an infectious smile that immediately conveys his friendliness. He is very happy when students gather around him. With a slightly haughty manner, he turns from front to back; he bends his arms and legs and demonstrates his stability and strength. He most enjoys demonstrating various body positions for people confined to bed, but this is really because this is the only opportunity he has to rest and he takes full advantage of it.

Jethro's counterpart is Sally--the human torso. Even though she is handicapped because she is armless and legless, she enjoys sharing her possessions with students.

Quite luckily for her, she feels no pain as her heart, lungs, and stomach is removed for close observation. She and Jethro communicate silently and easily with all students.

Residing quite near in room E-60 is the Chase family. Mr. and Mrs. Chase and their infant child are invalids, confined either to beds or wheelchairs. All of them eagerly welcome students by joining in the demonstrations of various nursing procedures. Unlike most people in their pre-

Student Gift-Pax

Fall is here again -- and so are our free gift-pax kits. Teeth and hair will be brighter this semester -- and it's free as always. Our campus will again be distributing the free student gift-pax kits of toilet articles as over 2,000 other colleges and universities throughout the United States have done for the past fifteen years. A good will promotion of leading manufactures -- packaged by Gift Pax, Inc., West Hempstead, N. Y., who makes them available to us each quarter.

Free student gift-pax will be available to the student body in "K" building. There are coed assortments and male oriented product assortments as well. Posters located at various focal points on campus indicate time and place of distribution.

The various clients represented in each student gift-pax kit are Bristol-Myers, Colgate-Palmolive, Proctor & Gamble, etc. -- with appropriate assortments going to male and female students in colorful zodiac designed re-usable plastic toilet article kits.

Come early (while the supply lasts) and bring your identification (I. D. Card) to receive your student gift-pax.

dicament, they never complain, but silently accept all that is done for their comfort and welfare.

It is easy to see why the nursing students become so endeared to these "people". The fondness continues long after graduation. So, when you hear any nurse speak of Mr. and Mrs. Chase, you will know at once she is referring to a very dear and very old friend.

NEW FACE in the Dental Auxiliary programs belongs to Mrs. Cheryl Serrill. Mrs. Serrill will assume her full time teaching responsibilities beginning September 1. A native of Seattle, Washington, Mrs. Serrill graduated from the University of Washington with a B.S. in Dental Hygiene. Her husband is a pilot stationed at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base. The Serrills have been in Goldsboro since May and make their home at 100 Bolling Drive.

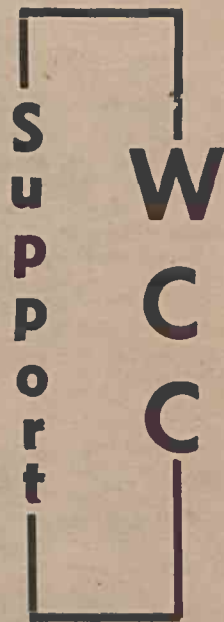

The AP Maintenance Program

A mobile classroom was delivered to the Aerospace Maintenance Program Hangar on Friday (24 July 1970). This classroom was added to help meet the rapid growth of interest in the Airframe and Powerplant Maintenance Program.

Airframe students have marshalled their talents in rebuilding a Cessna "195" which had received major damage before delivery to the A & P school. The wings have been "clipped" about five feet on each side, which will require less hangar storage space. The Powerplant class is presently overhauling the engine. When the airplane is considered safe for full ground operation, it will be used as a taxi training vehicle for all students. All of the maintenance work on this airplane has been performed by the students under the leadership of Mr. John Steele, Mr. William Largent, and Mr. Pete Zonge.

The Airframe and Powerplant maintenance classes are also presently reworking an "antique" Bellanca low wing monoplane. Any antique airplane always makes a crowd gathering show piece, but to keep one flying; wow!

The Powerplant class has reworked an $-2800 Pratt & Whitney aircraft engine which has been "cut-away" for a training device. Just turn the electric motor on and all the internal parts may be seen in action from the three blade propeller to the valves and crankshaft.

These worthy Dental Assisting students put in long hours and a lot of hard work to earn this trophy.
