

Team teaching enhances instruction at WCC

By CHRIS EDWARDS

Some instructors at WCC are using resources readily available-- other instructors who have expertise in another discipline or who have a special skill.

Diane Price, Director of the Writing Center, has assisted both Bob Biggers, Engineering Department, and Tim Brewer, Parks and Recreation, with writing projects they have assigned their students.

Students have gotten into the teaching act, too.

When Liz Meador wanted her ENG 103 (Technical Writing) students to have exposure to Quartro Pro to create visuals like line, bar, and pie charts, Vann Spivey of the Business Department, who had helped in the past, sent Allison Smith, one of his students, to teach the session.

This quarter on April 16, Miriam Wessell's Children's Literature class became a fairy tale land through the eloquent reading of Dr. Edmond Hogan as he related the literary magic of fellow Irishman Oscar Wilde.

Hogan has also performed dramatic readings for Kathryn Spicer's ENG 265 class.
