STUDYING THE ROMANTICS '60s STYLE: Students in Kathryn Spicer's British Literature II class study the Romantic poets in a coffee house setting. The students played music, did readings and performed a rap about a John Keats poem. Mrs. Spicer used this method of teaching because the Romantic poets "were a lot like our '60s songwriters and protest people. They were the Bob Dylans and Joan Baezs of their age." Pictured
