

North Carolina Athletic Association Gets New Rules

By KENNY BROOKS

The North Carolina Community College Athletic Association has adopted four new rules for the coming basketball season, Joe Linney, president elect of the association announced.

The first of these rules is the adoption of the red, white and blue ball, but will still be two ounces lighter than the official American Basketball Association ball. This ball will only be used in scheduled conference games.

The association has also adopted the regulation ABA three-point play rule. This means any shot taken outside a 25 foot radius of the basket will count three points instead of the usual two.

Another adoption made by the NCCCAA is a new foul shot regulation. Under this ruling, the first six team fouls made, the team fouled will be awarded the ball out of bounds instead of given a foul shot except in the instance of a foul committed while a player is in the act of shooting. In this case the player will be awarded free throws under the old rule.

Last of all, to fulfill the desires of the spectators, the dunk shot has been legalized once again.

In talking with Joe Linney, coach of the Cougars of Wilkes Community College, he stated that the way the Cougars are presently developing and with a few preseason games under their belt, they will definitely be a contender in the conference race under these new rules.

NCCCAA Splits Conference The Community College Athletic Association has also split the conference into two divisions similar to the association splits now existing in both the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association.

Wilkes Community College is in the Western Division along with Cleveland Technical Institute, Davidson County Community College, Gaston College, and Surry Community College. In the Eastern Division with Beaufort County Technical Institute, Cape Fear Technical Institute, Fayetteville Technical Institute, James Sprunt Institute, Lenoir Community College, Sandhills Community College, and Wayne Community College.

Yesterday's War

I am the memory of the past, the forgotten changer of history, the building blocks of nations. I am conqueror and liberator, hero and villain, patriot and butcher. I am the dead of yesterday's war.

I have huddled cold and scared in the forests of Norway and the jungles of Luzon. My feet have trod the deck of the Duke of York and the hard dirt floor of Dachau. I have watched the ships in Scapa Flow and the misty iron sky at Dover. I have laughed and sung and drunk my beer and I have worried and wept and prayed. And I have died.

How can I, a living breathing feeling being, be reduced in an instant to a mere shadow in the memory of another?

A brother in Lintz enters a room once peeling with gaiety and good will and remembers me.

A comrade in Antrim sits and sips from his glass at an empty, lonely table and remembers me.

A mother in Kyoto finds a cap buried in an old, rusting, seldom-opened trunk and remembers me.

A girl in Adelaide discovers a letter in a dusty, broken, forgotten volume and remembers me.

For a moment my specter invades their memory - then flickers - then fades and I die again.

I am the dead of yesterday's war.

Ski Club

If you happen to walk by the bulletin board in the student commons, burn an extra calorie by affixing your name to the list of those people interested in forming a ski club at WCC.

Mr. Jim Martin, sponsor of the club, has managed to get some rather large discounts at the Sugar Mountain Ski Area, and all that is needed is a large turnout of members. The reduced rates will apply to lift tickets.

Sampson County is North Carolina's largest county.
