For the past few months we have noticed a growing tendency on the part of automobiles to shun the ruts in the regular driveways by using parts of the campus which have never been appropriated to public use. The walk from Memorial Hall around by the library and King Hall as well as the entire ground in front of Cox and Archdale have been special victims of these circumstances despite the fact that some feeble efforts have been put forth to keep the cars within bounds. Now there is no reason why the rude conduct of these trespassers, which has already resulted in irreparable damages to the college grounds should any longer be tolerated by the campus committee and we insistently suggest that no time be wasted in finding the proper course to preserve the beauty of the campus even if to do so would necessitate the employment of rather drastic measures.

There is another thing that should not be overlooked while we are reviewing the conditions of the college grounds. During the recent rainy weather several of the walks have become impassable in places and as a natural consequence the grass on each side has been kneaded into the mud. This is entirely due to the fact that some of the walks have assumed the shape of a breadtray and hold water as readily. A few loads of gravel would easily put the footways in fairly good shape for the rest of the winter and when the spring opens they should be thrown up substantially higher in order to ward off a similar difficulty every time it rains.

DR. ERDMAN IN CHAPEL.

The Guilford students were very fortunate in having with them on Monday morning of last week to conduct the chapel exercises, the well known missionary, Dr. Erdman, from Korea.

In a clear, concise, yet interesting manner he brot to the minds of his hearers a sense of the need and of the possibilities of Korea. This he did by relating in a most interesting manner the story of one native of Korea, telling how he was converted to Christianity, and how he worked among his own people to give them the story of Christ also.

Dr. Erdman left with his hearers this message, especially—that the world does not owe us a living, but that every Christian owes the world a life.

Evening Meeting.

Again on Monday evening Mr. Erdman addressed the student body and once again he gave a splendid and appealing message. He read, as a basis for his talk a part of the sixth chapter of John. Mr. Erdman especially emphasized the fact that every one needs a foundation for life that will bear all the strains of traffic, without giving an inch.

Faith, he said, is the foundation of all Christian religion. Three reasons why this is true, he said, are: First, faith gives us a God. He brot out the difference between practical atheism and inherited atheism. Second, faith gives us power. Third, it gives us work to do. That work, the greatest work, the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom, because, he said, Christ's supreme purpose in life was the evangelization of the world.

The students all feel very grateful to Mr. Erdman for the message he gave, and certainly each one who heard him received an inspiration.

SOCIAL AT FOUNDER'S.

Last Saturday evening the boys and girls entered Founder's Hall with that kind of spirit that always prevails when a social is on hand.

Tables had been arranged for progressive rook, which was supposed to be the main feature of the evening, but many other forms of progression took place which were neither arithmetical nor geometrical.

The rook players kept the game going very earnestly since there was a prize to be awarded to the couple progressing the greatest number of times. Three couples tied and drew to see which was entitled to the award. Addie Morris and Jones Smith drew the highest number and thus won the six Hershey's.

Altho "two" was the popular number of the evening a few showed an unselfish spirit by furnishing splendid music.
