ALUMNI!

Come to the Big Game Saturday Night.

The game between Guilford and U. N. C.—to be played at Greensboro Y. M. C. A. on next Saturday night, promises to be one of the strongest of the season. For this reason, it would seem unnecessary to urge attendance upon this game, but the woeful absence of Guilfordians on similar occasions in the past makes it very evident that a pressing call for loyal support is not out of place here. There is no better channel through which alumni and old students can continue to show their interest in their Alma Mater than through athletics, and especially through interest in those games played away from the college. To win a game, a team needs to be backed up, and nobody can do that so well as those who have felt the thrill before. Come out and help Guilford score another success in basket ball, and renew your college spirit Saturday night.

The criticism has recently been offered that the Guilfordian as a publication does not contain sufficient material of a literary nature—that it is lacking in short stories, poems, sketches and other varieties of writing purely literary in character.

Keeping in mind the fact that the function of a college weekly is primarily that of a chronicle for college happenings there doubtless exists nevertheless some ground for the above criticism.

The Guilfordian was first published with the general plan that there should be appended to the regular weekly paper a literary supplement once during each month. For some reason this idea was never carried out and only one supplement has appeared up to date.

It is the purpose of the present staff to put out a literary supplement in the near future and by this means it is hoped that talent heretofore hidden may be brot to light. This supplement should represent the best efforts of that part particularly of our student body which is not on the board.

If you "lisp in numbers," if you are a favored child of the Muse, then give vent to your feelings in some form of poetic verse. If, on the other hand the thousand and one possibilities of short story writings appeal to you try your hand at something original along that line.

There is certainly no reason why we could not have a literary supplement which is representative of our several ability in a literary way.

In order that the highest good may revert to the greatest number there needs to be spread abroad in our college of Guilford a more general sense of individual responsibility—each and every boy and girl needs to realize that he or she is an integral part of college life here whether or not that particular student in question be an office holder. It matters little whether or not a student has had a particular part or office in some organization assigned to him—that should by no means be a prerequisite of good work in a college organization. The tendency to leave to a few persons the service which should be performed whole-heartedly by all alike, is all to prevalent at Guilford.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

The prayer meeting on last Thursday night was of a general character but one full of interest and inspiration. The meeting was opened by a few well chosen remarks by Miss Deborah Brown. "We should everyone," said the leader, "take a part in the meeting and feel it a part of our duty to give to the meeting and not be content with always listening. Possibly we might say something that would reach some one and lighten her burden."

After this Miss Brown threw the meeting open for all. This invitation was responded to by a number of the girls and members of the faculty. The thought of giving was emphasized by nearly all the speakers. "We are sure," said one, "to say something that will strengthen not only ourselves but those who hear." Plans were suggested for improving the Association and thus enabling the whole work to be more efficient. Although we are but a small part in the great work, we must do our part so that no weak links will be found.

Quite a number of the girls estimated the value of the Association to them. Some placed it first among the enjoyable and beneficial things which one meets here, while others ranked it among the best things with which we come in contact.

Throughout the meeting was one of the best held this year and we are expecting many more of this high standard.

EXCHANGES.

The magazines and weeklies that have found their way into the Guilfordian office have been thoroly enjoyed—not only for the entertaining reading which they have brot, but also for the glimpses of the real college life of the respective colleges.

The State Normal Magazine for January with its patriotic poems and wholesome short stories found an especially warm welcome.

The Wake Forest Student, bearing the stamp of its usual high grade of excellence, has been eagerly read.

The Critograph and Skull and Bones both come from the Old Dominion. Both are good weeklies. It is very apparent however that even the most diligent readers of Life would shutter at and consign to the waste basket some of the coarse jokes published in the latter paper. Some short sketches could much more profitably fill the space occupied by these stale and unwholesome jokes.

The Flat Hat evidently hails from a town where advertisers are most generous. Indeed it proves to be an advertising sheet with a little college news interspersed. Its chief merit is its quaintness.

Among the others which have been gladly received are: The Trinity Chronicler, The Quaker Campus, The Brown and White, Radcliffe News, The Laurentian, Old Gold and Black, Davidsonian, Pine and Thistle, The Princess.
