QUAKERS LOSE TO SOUTH CAROLINA

South Carolinians Defeat Locals By a 9-0 Score.

Last Thursday at Cone Park the University of South Carolina piled up nine tallies against the Quakers and romped away with the game. As the Daily News said, however, "The game was nothing like as one sided as the score indicated. On the contrary several fine plays were made." As far as the fielding was concerned, there was little to choose between the two teams, but Waring held the Guilford "batters" at his mercy, while U. S. C. connected with Edwards' delivery freely during three out of the nine innings. As usual Geensboro did not patronize the game. There were about 10 in the grandstand and a dozen or so out along the fence.

The game started off well for the first three frames, Carolina managing to get one man as far as third, when a wonderful ranning catch of a long fly to left field by Stratford spoiling their hope of tallying. In the next Carolina started the fun. A hit was scored by the first man up and two following laid down perfect bunts, filling the bases. The next man hit to deep center and the runner on third came home. A sacrifice bunt brought in another tally and a long drive brought in the third. An error, passed ball, single and double brought in two more scores in the next frame. In the ninth the Carolina lads came back and an error, two singles, a base on balls and a wild throw, with an infield out, netted four tallies.

Porter, the Carolina catcher, collided with the third baseman in the seventh frame while chasing a foul and was unable to continue the play, being replaced by Byrd.

HENRY CLAY NOTES

The Henry Clay Society met Friday night in regular session. A very good attendance was observed. The attendance has been excellent all this year and the good work of the society has been greatly due to this fact, for the membership has been so small that it would have been impossible to do good work if practically everyone had not attended.

The question of an income tax was discussed by the debaters, who were nearly all new men. Considerable improvement was shown by several of them. After the debate Spot Taylor gave the current events of the campus and he showed that he keeps up with about all the love affairs on the hill.

The critic then rendered a criticism that if taken to heart by the speakers will greatly help them to overcome the difficulties that seem to confront them. Next Friday night has been set as the time when the competitors for the improvement prize will render their final speeches and everyone is looking forward with interest to the outcome.

THE CLAYS HOLD ANNUAL CONTEST

The Prize Awarded to Gladstone Hodgkin.

The last oratorical contest of the school year was given by the Henry Clay Literary Society last Saturday evening, May 10.

The first oration was, "The War Work of the Salvation Army," given by Leslie H. Barrett. In this oration Mr. Barrett told how the Salvation Army had taken the place of mothers among the boys at the front. It had been friend to the friendless, help to the helpless and home to the homeless.

In the oration, "The Champion of Americanism," H. Grady McBane paid a tribute to the late ex-president, Theodore Roosevelt. The speaker said that Roosevelt respected and loved his people. He was a great patriot, a great man and a great American.

Luby R. Casey gave the third oration, "A Vital Need." Mr. Casey began by showing what the present school system of North Carolina owes to such men as Aycok, McIver and Joyner. He then brought out the fact that there are still many needs for the school of North Carolina. "Better teachers are needed," he said, "and one of the chief ways to get better teachers is to pay better salaries. The taxpayers will respond if they are made to see the need.

"Nor Border, Nor Breed, Nor Birth" was next given by Gladstone Hodgkin. The substance of his oration was that the United States can never be again what it once was, traditional isolation has been forever destroyed. "Negro Life in the South" was treated by F. Murray White. Mr. White just showed what slavery did for the negro. It made a skilled laborer of him, but it taught him that labor was a disgrace. "The problem now," said the speaker, "is to rid his mind of this idea."

The last oration, "Americanism," was given by Phal Hodgkin. Every American, he said, should be proud of his country, of her institutions and natural resources. The one thing to do is to never lose sight of the true principles of Americanism.

These young men all lived up to the usual standard of the Henry Clay Society. They not only were a credit to their society, but to the college as a whole.

The judges for the evening were R. J. M. Hobbs, C. J. Lambeth and Dr. L. L. Hobbs. Dr. L. L. Hobbs awarded the prize to Gladstone Hodgkin.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Miss Bertha Fox and Mr. Norman Fox.

ALUMNI.

The marriage of Miss Mabel Crutchfield to William Nelson, both former students of Guilford College, will occur on Thursday, May 15, at the home of the bride. They will reside at Elsmere, Del., where Mr. Nelson holds a position with the Rhodes Belting Company.

THE SENIORS AT PILOT VIEW FARM

Georgiana Proves to Be a Wonderful Hostess.

Whoever says the class of '19 is, in any way, unlucky because of the fateful thirteen members, must be mistaken. This is the unanimous verdict of every member of the Senior class and also Professor Brinton, Dr. and Mrs. Binford, after the royal feast day which came to them last Saturday. It all came about because of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Bird to spend a day at their home near Thomasville.

Cars were provided by some of the guests and about 10 o'clock the merry party set out for regions unknown. Miss Georgiana had things so well planned that no mishap occurred and by 12 o'clock the beautiful country home had received the well-pleased guests. After a sufficient length of time spent in conversation, dinner was served. Dinner! Unless the reader could have been present he can have no idea how much is implied by that word in this case. The good things were too numerous to mention and such a lot of them! The chief regret was that only a certain amount could be eaten.

But as all good things must end, even this dinner came to an end and the party wended its way into the grassy yard, where each pursued his own course. Various feats of muscular skill were brought into play. Then, with orders from Mrs. Bird, the party proceeded to make ice cream, which proved to be so delicious that every guest would stake his all on the fact that it was better than Jove's nectar.

The perfect day was closed with a series of songs and then the guests very reluctantly turned their faces toward home. The occasion was one of the most delightful anyone could wish and sincere gratitude is due Mr. and Mrs. Bird. They will always be held in grateful remembrance. The Seniors are lucky to have Georgiana in the class and she will always be the dearest and best for having given her class this perfect day.

WEBS HAVE INTERESTING DEBATE.

The program at the last regular meeting of the Webs was, perhaps, the best rendered one during the spring semester. After the new officers, R. A. Lineberry, president; John D. Dorsett, secretary, and Charles Robison, marshal, were installed, the query: Resolved, That immigration should be further restricted by law, was debated. J. Dorsett, P. Trotter and H. Raiford, on the affirmative, were successful in their contentions. C. Robison, O. Stafford and Jack Brown ably defended the negative.

After David White rendered an exceedingly instructive critic's report, the society adjourned.

And Receive Reward for Best Sunday School Attendance.

Every Sophomore girl's heart beat a little bit faster when she was handed an invitation to be present Friday afternoon at four o'clock on the steps of New Garden Hall. The invitation suggested that each should come prepared for hiking. This meant that the Sophomores had won in the Sunday school contest for best attendance because it was the Y. W. C. A. cabinet who was thus favoring them. Although the rain descended and the floods came, the cabinet was not at its wits' end by any means. On the contrary, the visitors were told to return to their childhood days, in dress at least.

It was thus that they met and repaired to the little Peele cottage, where they took their seats and were confronted by teacher as in days of yore. As they were good little girls, and the day was Friday, teacher told them they might have a spelling match. This met the approval of every one, of course, and much skill was displayed in this particular art. Soon growing tired of this, as children will do, they began the interesting process of practicing for commencement day. The speeches made and the songs sung spoke exceedingly well for young and inexperienced pupils. Lunch time was then announced. The hunger and thirst of everyone was soon satisfied with the heaps of tomato and raisin sandwiches and delicious cake and lemonade. All dispositions were calling for action; therefore, a hilarious game of blind man's buff was engaged in. This was going splendidly when—alas, the old, faithful bell at Founders suddenly calls to hasten elsewhere.

This was indeed a unique entertainment, and to say that it was enjoyed is a mild method for expressing the happiness beaming on every face.

PROFESSOR BRINTON DISCUSSES ELECTRO MAGNETIC WAVES

The meeting of the Science Club held last Wednesday night was in charge of Prof. Brinton, who gave a talk on electro magnetic waves. He began by showing how these waves could be produced and used in wireless telegraphy, and then turning to wave producers of atomic dimensions he showed how radiant energy is sent out by the motions of electrons. The electron theory and the electromagnetic theory of light were briefly explained and illustrated by experiments. Cathode rays were produced and the spectra of some of the elements thrown on the screen.
