

A TRIP TO PILOT MOUNTAIN.

Extracts From the Diary of Hugh Moore and A. Lineberry, Who Walked to Pilot Mountain Last Saturday.

We left Guilford College at 3:35 p. m. Friday. Walked steadily until we reached Dunlap Springs about 6:30. After resting a few minutes we then walked until about 9 o'clock. Liking eggs we decided to purchase some, but it seemed that everybody had been setting hens that day, but we finally secured a half dozen about dark. Our intention was to camp at the next branch, but we never did come to one, so we stopped in a big pine thicket about a mile from Walkertown. Ate supper and went to bed. No water. Did not sleep well. Left at seven o'clock the next morning. Ate dinner at King at 1:15. Reached Pinnacle at 2:35, which is about two miles from Pilot Mountain. After resting awhile we reached the top of the mountain at 5:50 p. m., which is about 47 miles from Guilford College. On the average we made four miles an hour. We walked around a few minutes, then lay down on a rock and were soon fast asleep. We woke up and ate breakfast about seven o'clock. No water. We then built a big fire and placed some pine boughs between the fire and a rock to sleep on, after which the wind sang us to sleep. However, the ants desired that we stay up longer. As Pilot Mountain is 3,300 feet above sea level, our bed linen was inadequate for the occasion, and we were forced to keep a large fire all night long and live in close communion. Arose about 6 o'clock and saw the sun rise, which was very beautiful. We then descended to a spring about a third of the way down the mountain, as we were very thirsty. We washed our hands and faces for the first time since we left college. After eating a hearty breakfast we went to sleep again, being interrupted several times by courting couples. We left the mountain about 2:30 and took a train for Guilford Battle Ground, reaching college about 7 p. m.

LAST JUNIOR MEETING.

The last meeting of the Junior class was held on last Tuesday evening, May 6.

Out of the goodness of her heart, Miss Louisa extended the time one-half an hour and everyone did his or her best to make use of the title, "Jolly Junior," for the last time, for at the next class meeting all will have put on the dignity and stateliness of Seniors.

This meeting was doubly enjoyed by the girls from the fact that they were 'set up' to cream—and plenty of it—and cake.
