Guilford Wins Dual Debate From Hampden-Sidney

Edward L. Hollady and Gladstone Hodgin Win 2-1
Decision over Cook and Headlee While A. I. Newlin and J. C. Newlin Win a Unanimous Decision Over Adams and Moody. :: ::

For the second time Guilford has met another college in the debating game. Four years ago when she defeated A. & E. was the first attempt.

On Saturday evening Feb. 19, 1921 the affirmative team of Guilford met the negative team of Hampden-Sidney College, Va., on Memorial Hall Stage. President Binford welcomed the visiting debators to the platform and presided throughout the exercises of the evening.

Previous to the debate the audience was favored with an instrumental solo, "Polonaise Brillante" by Miss Lloyd Merrimon.

Edward L. Hollady, leading the line of argument for the affirmative stated as an introduction the importance of the coal industry. After interpreting the term of the question which was, Resolved, That waiving all questions as to transportation, the Federal Government should own and operate all the coal mines in the United States, constitutionally granted, he gave the outline of the affirmative argument which was based on the answers to the three following questions;

1. Is the present system sufficient?
2. Does government operation offer the best system to supply the public with coal?

3. Does government control offer a solution to the labor problem?

"The present system has proved inefficient because of the vast amount of wastage and also the great profits made. There is no shortage of the coal supply in the ground, therefore the trouble is in the operation of the mines. Immediate gain and speculations are great factors in the present system."

Norman Cook began the attack of the negative. The negative, discussion was based on the following six points.

1. Government control is unnecessary, unreachable, and unefficient.
2. It is financially inexpedient.
3. Its introduction would lead to Socialism.
4. Such control would be regulated by politics.

5. Government control would be unable to prevent labor troubles.

6. The function of government is to regulate.

Cooke admitting the inefficiency of the present system, proposed that it be remedied by regulation. The government in the U. S. according to the Negative, has not been successful in controlling industry neither have other countries succeeded. Private enterprise has incentive of competition. The Government is financially unable to take on such a debt. Government control is only a step toward Socialism. Socialism is the elimination of The Man and the coming of a man.

Gladston Hodgin, the second speaker of the affirmative then argued that the purchase of mines was not financially unreasonable and that control by a non-profitmaking agency was the only efficient method of operation. The two things that concern the people are, first, getting coal when they need it, and second—getting it at reasonable prices. The present method of distribution is faulty. The mines are in operation only two-thirds of the year, causing a great rush in the winter months. Therefore one third more labor, machinery and capital are employed than necessary. The government alone can cope with these evils.

Thomas Headlee in presenting the three remaining points of the negative, showed how the temptations for graft, dishonesty and political corruption would be multiplied by the proposed system. "The government is unable to prevent labor strikes. Strikers strike against everything. Government is not intended to create and own but to protect and regulate. Government ownership is not in accordance with American principles."

Hollady and Hodgin in the affirmative rebuttals made clear those points which had been slightly attacked by the negative.

Cook and Headlee made attacks at the affirmative argument and in closing, argued that the negative statement would stand as they were unattacked by the affirmative.

An instrumental duet was given by Misses Grace Stone and Katie Lambeth, while the judges rendered their decision two in favor of the affirmative.

The judges were J. E. Latham, E. D. Broadhurst and Frederick Archer.

After the debate a reception was given at Founders in honor of the debators.

Saturday evening J. C. Newlin and A. I. Newlin represented Guilford in a forensic battle with Hampden-Sidney College of Virginia. Hampden-Sidney is one of the oldest colleges in America having been established in 1776. It is interesting to know that Patrick Henry was on the first board of directors, and that Thomas Jefferson and James Madison graduated from this school. The graduates of Hampden-Sidney are responsible for the establishment of more than a dozen institutions of higher learning. Many other interesting things could be said about this quaint old institution, but it will suffice to say, that

Guilford Loses To Elon

Final Score 33-15

On Friday night February 18th, Guilford met Elon in a fast basket ball game, on the latter's floor. The game, although marked by an unusually large number of personal fouls, was an interesting one; particularly during the first half. During this period, the Quakers, by close guarding, effective passing and good shooting, held their opponents to 12 points and scored 9. Then the second half Elon showed better form than during the first half and by good passing and accurate shooting they succeeded in rolling up 21 points, making their final score 33.

Guilford was decidedly off during the second half. The passing was limited and the shooting was erratic. Capt. Frazier was not up to his usual standard, particularly in the matter of shooting fouls. However he and Lindley caged 15 points during the contest.

Elon showed her best in Newman Fix and E. Johnson.

MRS. CARL SPEAKS TO GIRLS

Interesting Lecture on "Social Morality."

On Friday evening the girls of the College were very fortunate in hearing Mrs. Linnie Carl speak on the subject of "Social Morality." Mrs. Carl is a W. C. T. U. worker of National reputation. She has traveled and spoken in eighteen states. Her striking personality was very pleasing.

The subject was treated in a most practical manner. The ideal girl was so forcefully portrayed that no girl could help but profit by having heard Mrs. Carl "The Many Social immorals of our country today can only be overcome by the standard which the girls and women hold. So it behooves every girl to strive to bring about the conditions which will make right these immorals and make this country a better place in which to truly live."

SENIORS ELECT OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of the Senior Class on Feb. 8, the following officers were elected for the spring term:

President, Berry Lee White.
Secretary, Grace Stone.
Marshall, S. Herman Raiford.

"Daughter of Jarius"

Sung by College Chorus

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 16, "The Guilford College Chorus" rendered "The Daughter of Jarius" in a very pleasing manner. Much time and practice was spent in preparation and never before was more skill and earnestness shown both on the part of the chorus and its able director, Professor J. W. White.

Misses Henley and Williams assisted in rendering the solos, duets and quartettes with Professor White and Mr. Hatfield, a distinguished tenor singer of Greensboro.

This musical production was well rendered and received considerable applause from a large audience.

PROFESSOR NEWLIN SPEAKS TO Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. Meeting was conducted Thursday night by Professor Newlin.

After several hymns had been sung, he read as his scripture reading, a portion from the 23rd chapter of Matthew. Then followed a few short prayers, given by various members of the association.

As an introduction to his talk, Professor Newlin read a short chapter from a book on selfishness in which a few of the following thoughts were contained: "For one to obtain the best results from any thing one must put something in it." "Always take pains to keep from hurting the feelings of your fellow men and train yourself to acquire the ability to make people feel at home. One way of doing this is to guard against topics which might irritate and above all do not gossip, especially if that gossip is of a slanderous nature."

The speaker then enlarged upon the above thoughts by dwelling on several phases of human nature along the same line.

"How many of us are impatient when things don't go to suit us? Do we get mad and say things we should not, or do we keep our head? All of us have disappointments, but can we take these disappointments in the right spirit and go ahead? Besides being impatient, people, especially college people, are subject to envy. We all glory in the student who shows that he is man enough to make a place in college athletics, and we are likely at times to envy him, but instead of envying him we should start at the bottom as he did and try to make ourselves that way. Do you envy the boy who makes A's? Did you ever think that those same possibilities lay within your own power, and that you too could make A's? How many times has he been
