EDITORIAL

Do you know that there is an organization in North Carolina known as the Intercollegiate Press Association? Probably you noticed the term in the college newspaper and passed it up with the thought that some fellow wanted to start something and figured the whole thing out in fifteen minutes, or more probably you didn't even give it a passing thought.

Perhaps your lack of knowledge in regard to this association is due partly to the fact that the organization has not done anything particularly spectacular during the time that it existed. The fact is, it was never intended that it should do such.

The Intercollegiate Press Association is not a dead organization, instead, it is very much alive. Organized and managed exclusively by the college students of North Carolina, it has already begun to take forward steps and is being kept in motion almost entirely by the efforts of these students.

This association was organized at the University of North Carolina last January. Officers were elected and a constitution was drawn up and adopted. The primary object, as expressed by the representatives at that time, was to create a keener interest in journalism and college literary work; to raise the standards of college publications and the bringing together from time to time of representatives of different publications, in order to promote a better understanding of the problems of college journalism. The last mentioned purpose is by far the most important since in it lies the greatest possibility of carrying out the others. Any one who attended the recent meeting of the association, held at Davidson, could not help but feel that such an assemblage would bring good results. The interest shown in the organization was an inspiration to anyone who was present, and to the inexperienced staff of many college papers the practical advice given by men who knew was of greater value than can be estimated.

This organization is worth while. Not a perfect working body to be sure, but one worthy of the thought of every college man and woman, both student and faculty, to make it better. The possibilities that lie within it cannot be safely estimated, if only it is kept alive and made to grow by the thinking college students whose attitude towards it must determine its destiny.

The number of withdrawals from the college this year has been twelve less than last year thus showing an increase in the average attendance.

JAMESTOWN DEFEATS BUFFALO ON HOBBS FIELD

Score 8 to 2

The Jamestown baseball team played Buffalo on Hobbs field last Saturday afternoon. The game was interesting from the fact that it was one of the series of elimination games to determine the winner of the western state championship.

The game was a well played contest except two innings when the Buffalo nine went up in the air for a time. Neither side scored until the seventh. When Jamestown scored five runs on hits and errors. They also merited three more in the eighth.

Buffalo's only run came in the ninth, when after two were out they put two runs across. The features of the game were the hitting and fielding of Jamestown. Taylor also pitched a nice good ball but his support was weak.

SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED TO SENIORS

A. I. Newlin Goes to Haverford, Myrtle Cox to Bryn Mawr

At a recent chapel exercise, President Binford announced to the student body the winners of the scholarships, which are awarded each year to the two members of the Senior class who have made the best records in scholarship.

The Haverford scholarship was awarded to Algie I. Newlin, whose scholarship record along with his ability in many other college activi-
