

SOCIETY NOTES

ZATASIAN NOTES

The program of the Zatasian Society for last Friday evening was planned with the purpose of giving the members a clearer knowledge of the rules of order. Especial emphasis was put on the rules of debating as the society expects to do more of this type of work this spring than it has done in the last few years.

First, Nellie Allen gave a few of Robert's Rules of Order that apply most directly to the society. Following this Marianna White explained the fundamental rules of debating.

The last number was a debate: Resolved that capital punishment should be abolished. Allene Johnson and Frances Garner brought out some good points for the affirmative but the judges decided in favor of the negative which was upheld by Josephine Mock and Jennie Howard Cannon.

The critic, Alice Chilton, gave a good report after which she read a report of the secret critic.

PHILOMATHEAN NOTES

The Philomathean Literary Society held its second meeting of the new year Friday evening, January 13. Every Philomathean seems to have taken up her work with a determination to make the year of 1922 an improvement over the past one.

The following program was given: I. Debate, Resolved, That Congress should pass the Anti-lynching law now under consideration. Affirmative, Inez White, Grace Winslow; Negative, Louis Ross, Gladys Futrell. II. Uncle Remus Story.—Kathleen Riley.

III. Recitation, "Holding Off the Calf" by John Charles McNeil—Sallie Wilkins.

IV. Contribution of Joel Chandler Harris and JJohn Charles McNeil to Southern Literature—Annabel Thompson.

The debaters gave a good argument on the question, the affirmative proving successful in their contention that the Anti-lynching law should be passed.

The remainder of the program was devoted to the lives and some of the works of two of the great Southern writers and was of special interest to southern students.

Ethel Watkins, the critic for the evening, read a secret critic's report, which was an appeal to every Philomathean to put her best into all society work that she undertakes. After some helpful general criticism, society adjourned.

WEBSTERIAN

A question that has been of utmost interest to every one in the state for the past month or so, was brought up and settled at the last meeting of the Webs. The query reads as follows: Resolved, That capital punishment should be abolished. Although the time for the discussion of this question had been cut almost in half, in order to get out early for the basket ball game, yet each representative had so organized his argument that this debate proved the best heard in many meetings.

The affirmative, Nereus English, Bernie Cooper, and Walter Conner, were finally favored with the decision of the judges. However, the negative, Thomas English, Alton Warwick and Addison Smith were constantly on the job and kept the outcome in doubt to the very last.

The second number on the program, a harmonica and violin duet, by Myron Tatum and W. L. Rudd, was enthusiastically received. Their interpretations of the Old Folks' songs were met with applause from every one present.

Winn ended the literary exercises with several foreign, domestic, and local current events.

President Harris appointed a committee to render the sympathies of the Society to H. L. Macon, whose absence through sickness, has been so keenly felt by the Webs.

The critic, LaMont Edgerton, gave a brief but beneficial critique, after which the society adjourned.

CLAYS DEBATE CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

President, Murray White called the Henry Clay Literary Society to order at the regular time for meeting Friday evening, January 13. L. L. Williams was appointed critic for the evening.

After the preliminary exercises the speakers for the evening very intelligently argued the following question: Resolved that capital punishment should be abolished in the state of North Carolina.

The affirmative speakers, A. Lindley, M. Shore, and W. Thompson based their argument on the points that capital punishment is wrong in principle, is unnecessary and that life-imprisonment is better.

J. Cannon, F. Crutchfield, and V. White argued that capital punishment is justifiable on the grounds of economy and justice. The affirmative won the debate.

The record number on the program was a declamation, by Edward Hilder. This number was very humorous and was thoroughly enjoyed.

L. L. Williams then gave a splendid critic's report. He reviewed the debate, as a whole, pointing out the fallacies in argument produced and showing the danger of such reasoning in a debate.

The society was very pleased to have as a visitor, C. C. Sem, a native of Korea, who made a few remarks to the society about his homeland and also about the program of the evening.

"CARRIER CURRENT" NEWEST COMMUNICATION SYSTEM

Through a new method of electrical communication it is possible to send a telephone message over a trolley wire which while supplying power into the train acts as a conductor of another or second current which is superimposed upon it at a higher frequency.

At any convenient point along the line this second or "carrier current" may be picked up and carried short distances though the air where it may be made to operate a telephone instrument. The system may be used for communication between engineers of different trains on the same road, between the locomotive at the head of a long freight train and the caboose at the rear, or between the engineer and distant substations or terminals.

A demonstration of the system was given recently before a group of prominent railway men, by the General Electric Company.

ELECTROGRAPHS

More than twenty vessels ranging in size from a small fire boat to big Atlantic freighters and warships, are now propelled by electricity in the United States.

Spain has begun the electrification of her railways. The first contract for a stretch of forty miles was placed with an American concern, the International General Electric Company. Extensive electrification of the Spanish roads which run through mountainous territory, is expected to follow.

A lighting system has been devised for highways which makes it possible for night automobile drivers to travel with headlights dimmed, so brilliantly is the roadway lighted. Part of the Lincoln highway will be lighted by this system.

The radio message sent by President Harding at the opening of the great central radio station on Long Island, was picked up in over seventeen foreign countries. The station is operated by the Radio Corporation of America.

One of the largest circuit breakers in the world has recently been built by an American electrical concern. It is rated at 165,000 volts. According to Dr. C. P. Steinmetz, the energy dissipated when a circuit breaker of this size automatically opens on overload, is equal to the energy which would be consumed in a head-on collision between two 125 ton locomotives meeting at a speed of 45 miles an hour.

PICKING COTTON BY ELECTRIC.

A device consisting of a farm tractor equipped with an electric generator, is being used successfully in the Northern cotton belt to pick cotton with electricity's aid. Hollow flexible tubes reach out in four directions from the tractor. On the end of each is a set of revolving brushes encased in a small metal frame, with an opening about the size of a man's double fists, and sufficiently large to take a boll of cotton. The brushes are driven by an electric motor through a flexible drive shaft and revolve inwardly, or toward each other. This creates a comb-like movement which pulls the cotton from the plant the moment it comes in contact with the brushes. It is then sucked up the hollow tube and deposited in a receptacle carried on the tractor. Tests have indicated that the new electric cotton picker makes it possible for a person to gather from 400 to 700 pounds of cotton a day as compared with 70 to 150 by hand.

Down in the village of Ougney, in Southern France, they have the belief that when a man dies there is no use in his friends crying about it, and so they make merry.
