EDITORIAL COMMENT

To an editorial board of a newspaper there is nothing which more inspires it to do its best work than a large corps of readers.

Our paper had a good circulation last year, but it is far too small. Although every student of the college is a regular reader and all members of the Alumni Association receive our paper, yet there are vast numbers of Guilford admirers and supporters who have very little or practically no direct touch with our college life and its activities.

Realizing this condition, our last year's board added to its business staff a circulation manager who has formulated plans for greatly reducing this vast number of Guilfordians who do not regularly receive their college news.

In this list we find alumni, old students, and hundreds of friends. It is only through your cooperation and support that our plans can materialize.

In view of this the circulation manager has inserted on the last page of this issue a subscription blank, which you are kindly asked to fill in order that you may not miss a single copy.

More Pep

We oftentimes hear of college spirit, but how often do we see any manifestations of it?

There are many ways by which this spirit may be shown but to the average onlooker it is best shown on the athletic fields—first of all by the players and secondly by the student body.

What would you think of a college spirit which failed to create a single yell for one of its college teams, and which did not succeed in gaining an enthusiastic support of the student body during the whole year?

Whatever you think of such a spirit it will apply very well indeed to our college spirit last year.

Something was wrong. What was it? Let us suggest the lack of organization. Come on fellows! Let's get organized, then when we hear of college spirit we will know what it really means.

Student Government

A few days ago the President called a meeting of the old men to discuss some of the problems which are to face us the coming year.

The discussion finally resolved itself into a consideration of some form of student government for the men of the college. No decisions were reached, but the meeting adjourned to meet at a later date after a thorough consideration has been given to the proposition.

We of the Guilfordian feel that it is a great thing for a group of students to have a government of themselves, for themselves, and by themselves, but we also realize that such an organization with too many strings tied to it must be a failure.

We hope that the men of the college will consider the proposition with an open mind and with a desire to reach the best possible decision for our body of students as a whole.

DOROTHY DOAN DEAD

quest and she spent the night in a private room, early the next morning, before the physicians could elicit any further information, she died.

Physicians then examined her pocket-book and found her name on a bank-book of the Hamilton Trust Co. An entry on Friday showed that she had deposited $40. They were still puzzled as to her identity when a telephone call from Harpers Ferry referred them to an article in the Public Ledger. Obtaining a copy, they read a description of Miss Doan and an account of her disappearance.

Immediately the superintendent of the hospital wired Philadelphia detectives, informing them that the missing woman had been found. The detectives in turn notified Miss Doan's sister, Mrs. Sidney Hutton, of Browns Mills, N. J. Mr. Hutton thereupon went to Charles Town and took charge of the body.

Miss Doan was last seen Friday afternoon by the elevator boy who took her from her apartments on the sixth floor to the first. Later in the afternoon, her roommate, Miss Katherine Lehman, returned to the apartment. She thought nothing of Miss Doan's absence until 7 o'clock. Then she became worried and started to make inquiries. Friends having said they had not seen Miss Doan, Miss Lehman appealed to police to aid in the search.

All Friday night and Saturday the police tried to find the young teacher, and fliers were sent to all the hospitals. Finally, Mrs. Hutton, who had come to this city, decided to appeal to the Public Ledger, and all the facts she could give were published.

Miss Doan was a native of Hadley, Ind., where her father is a manufacturer. She came here to complete her education and took a post graduate course at Bryn Mawr College.

According to Miss Lehman, Miss Doan has been subject to heart attacks. Friends yesterday were, of course, unable to account for her appearance in Charles Town.

Senior Class Meets

The class of '23 met for the first time as seniors on Tuesday evening, September 19th, with twenty five members present.
