

SOCIETY NOTES

Websterians Debate Educational Question

Installation of officers was the chief event of the last meeting of the Websterians. Fred C. Winn will be president for the next term; Elton Warrick, vice-president; Thomas English, secretary; and George Crisp, marshal.

Other matters of business were the appointment of the following men as an executive committee: Sam Harris, James Howell, Walter Wiles. Wendel Cude, John Cude and Lee Cude were received into membership.

The chief feature of the program was a spirited debate on the query: "resolved, that the department of education should be added to the executive department of the United States government." Sam Harris, W. C. Hammond and Thomas Hadley defended the affirmative, but were defeated by their opponents, Fred C. Winn, Walter Wiles, and Addison Smith. Of the new men represented, Walter Wiles made a particularly telling argument.

The rest of the program was devoted to a harmonica solo by Ernest Macon and a humorous number by Lee Richardson.

Zatasians Elect Officers

A brief business meeting was held last Friday evening, Oct. 20, in the Zatasian hall. Officers were elected as follows: president, Allene Johnson; secretary, Hazel Richardson; marshal, Pansy Donnell. President Mock then appointed various committees to arrange for next Friday evening when the Websterian literary society will be the guests of the Zatasians' reception given in their honor.

Edith Hedgecock was received as a new member, and Eleanor Johnson was reinstated into membership. After the critic, Alta Rush, gave her report, the society joined the Philomatheans in Memorial Hall where Dr. Kellerman of Greensboro read selections from Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."

Officers Installed By Philomatheans

The new officers of the Philomathean society were installed last Friday evening. The president appointed Misses Hope Motley, Edith Macon and Edna Coble to serve on the executive committee. Miss Rose Elliot was received as a member of the society.

The regular program for the evening was dispensed with and the Philomatheans joined the Zatasians at Memorial Hall to hear Dr. Kellerman.

Clays Reinstate Former Member

The attendance at the Clay society meeting Friday night was unusually large. Two visitors, Wray Farlow and George Martin, were present, both of whom made short speeches of appreciation.

The debate of the evening was in every respect up to the standard, the speakers displaying an extensive knowledge of the subject coupled with much oratorical "pep."

The question was that of abolishing the electoral college and choosing the president by direct vote of the people. Cummings and Taylor of the affirmative won the decision of the judges.

Joyce, Reynolds, Crutchfield and Barbee sang the chant quartet "Three Little Kittens," which was of special interest.

The society was glad to reinstate E. Wray Farlow into its membership.

At this time we think it appropriate to announce that the monopoly of class '23 has shifted to self-importance.

If competition is the spice of life, life is spicy among the girls, due to the new rat rule of the boys.
