Clays Hear Debate and Humorous Essay

The query for debate in the Henry Clay society meeting Friday evening was: "Resolved, that the United States war loans to the allies should be cancelled." Spot Taylor and Edward Holder won the decision of the judges for the affirmative. They argued that America is morally obligated to cancel the loan because her expenses in the common defense against German imperialism were less than those of the other nations, and that cancellation of the loans would help to reestablish trade among the nations and thereby build up a sound industrial system.

The negative argument clashed directly with the affirmative, Allison White and William Blair defending payment of the loan on the ground that the debt was honestly contracted, and that if cancelled would not tend toward a better industrial system, but would encourage Europe to maintain large armaments.

The second number on the program was a humorous essay by John Cannon, entitled, "How to Enjoy the Annual Battleground Hike." Mr. Cannon's literary style is to be commended. He worked in local color with an excellent choice of words. His delivery was very effective.

Extemporaneous Program Given By Philomatheans

An extemporaneous program in which the Philomatheans proved their ability to think on their feet, was much enjoyed Friday evening.

The program opened with a debate "Resolved, that letter postage should be reduced to one cent." This was defended unsuccessfully by Clementine Raiford while Henrietta Lassiter upheld the negative. The following numbers were then given; an instrumental solo by Ruth Ragsdale, silent oration, Bertha Zachary, recitation, Inez White; vocal solo, Hattie Burgess; impersonation, Nell Carroll; a five minute talk, by Ruth Pearson; "The ups and dows of a freshman," Margaret Armfield.

Lloyd Merriman was critic for the evening.

The Baptist line also did some good playing and held at critical moments. Bowlan, Crutchfield and Greeson were probably the best ground gainers for Wake Forest.

Guilford Man, Once A Governor, Is Dead

Lucius F. C. Garvin, former governor of Rhode Island, who dropped dead in his office at Providence on the afternoon of October 3, lived in Greensboro when a youth and received his early educational training at Guilford College. Older residents here recall the Garvin family.

For more than 40 years former Governor Garvin was a prominent Democratic leader in Rhode Island, and at the time of his death was perhaps the oldest practicing physician in that state. He was known nationally for his ardent championship of the single tax principle. His interest in the profession and in politics was as keen in his 31st year as in the first years of his practice and of his active career as a public man. He was the first and only member of the medical profession ever elected governor of Rhode Island, serving two years, 1903 and 1904, the gubernatorial elections then being held annually.

Lucius Fayette Clark Garvin was born in Knoxville, Tenn., November 13, 1841, the son of James and Sarah Ann (Gunn) Garvin. The death of James Garvin, shortly after his son's birth, caused the removal of the family to Greensboro, a few years prior to the war between the states. After receiving his preliminary training in Guilford College former Governor Garvin entered Amherst College, from which he graduated with a high record in 1862. Following his graduation he enlisted in the Union army and served with distinction during the war between the states. In 1867 he was awarded a diploma from Harvard Medical School.

A few years after the Garvin family removed to Greensboro from Tennessee, Dr. Garvin's mother was married to Col. Walter McConnell, a well known resident of Greensboro.

Although better known as a Democrat, Dr. Garvin was a progressive politically. After running for Congress five times in the second district of Rhode Island under the Democratic emblem, he left his party in 1912 to join the Progressives. In the course of his political career he effected much legislation for the benefit of the working classes.
