

SOCIETY NOTES

Ku Klux Klan Holds Attention Of Zays

The Ku Klux Klan, from its organization to its present prominence was discussed by the Zatasians on Friday evening.

A spirited debate on the question of the abolition of the Ku Klux Klan by the states, held the undivided attention of the society. Mary Webb Nicholson and Edith Spencer upheld the affirmative in a forceful manner but the argument of the negative by Virginia Osborne and Golda Farlow was more convincing and won the decision of the judges.

Pherlie Mae Sisk reviewed the history of the Klan, and Olive Jinette brought out some of its present conditions and accomplishments under the title of current events. Lucille Moore gave a humorous reading in negro dialect. But perhaps the most effective number of the program was the meeting of the "Klanners" by Bessie Phipps and Pansy Donnell who in a secret way revealed some personal scandal concerning the Zays.

Heated Argument by Webs On Ship Subsidy

A forceful and interesting debate on the question, "Resolved, that Congress should pass the present ship subsidy bill," was the feature of the program in the last meeting of the Websterian Society. Addison Smith and Fred Winn of the affirmative maintained that the passage of the bill would increase our foreign trade, would build up a powerful merchant marine and be an act of justice to the ship owners and sailors.

The negative speakers, Nereus English and Wendell Cude, assented that free ships and free trade was necessary for the development of foreign trade, and to build up a great commercial fleet. They mentioned the great cost of subsidizing which the people of the country must pay. After hearing this thorough-going discussion the judges rendered a decision for the affirmative.

Wilfred Outland then entertained the society with several gems of humor, and after the critic had rendered a brief report society adjourned.

Phils Commemorate February's Famous Men

The Philomathean society on February 23 enjoyed an interesting program centering around famous Americans born in February, Washington, Lincoln, and Longfellow.

Lois Rabey gave some sidelights on the character, manner and appearance of Washington which claimed attention because they were not of the list of facts usually told about him. The second number turned to Abraham Lincoln in some anecdotes from the life of the great president, related by Ruth Pearson. Grace Smithdeal then read some poems from Walt Whitman upon the death of Lincoln, "Captain, my Captain" among them. This was followed by "The Perfect Tribute," an inspiring incident connected with the Gettysburg Address, which was read by Sallie Pearson.

The fifth number was a piano solo, the familiar "Melody of Love," played by Marie Beaman.

The theme now changed from great statesmen to our own beloved poet Longfellow. Alma Stuart gave a delightful sketch of him as a poet and man, ending with a poem, "Footsteps of Angels."

Henry Clays Discuss Child Labor Ammendente

The child labor law which was threshed out by Congress less than a year ago and later ruled unconstitutional by the supreme court, was the topic discussed by the Clays Friday night in the following form: "Resolved, that an amendment be made to the constitution providing for a Federal Child Labor law." The amendment was introduced by Bascom Shore, leader of the affirmative, and later laid to rest by Marvin Shore and Garson Thornburg, who won the decision of the judges by showing that it would trample on the state's rights. A. I. Newlin, a former Clay, was present and made a good talk to the society.

Lanier's Philosophy Discussed at Y. M. C. A.

Thomas English, the Y. M. C. A. leader on Thursday evening, opened the meeting by reading Sidney Lanier's poem "The Song of the Chattahoochee." "The two main ideas of the poem," said the speaker, "are a definite purpose in life and a free mind." Briefly passing over the first, he took up the idea of a free mind.

"One must keep his mind free from all attractions that will develop into entanglements," stated the speaker. "All wish to succeed, yet many fail because they do not put themselves into condition to win." Continuing, Mr. English mentioned bad physical habits, ignorance, timidity, and superstitious ideas and customs as some things that keep people from the highest developments.

"To dodge the obstacles which confront us," affirmed Mr. English, "one must have freedom of mind, he must not follow customs simply because they are old."

"Rigid customs and habits of thought have retarded the development of Europe," he asserted, "while freedom of thought and lack of artificial and rigid customs has made the United States great, and has given us leaders such as Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

Y. W. C. A Discusses Financial Situation

The chief features of the Y. W. program last Thursday evening was a mock council meeting. The purpose of this council meeting was to discuss the financial situation of the local association. It became evident from a report by the treasurer that more funds must be raised by some method to send representatives to the national conference. A budget system providing for free offerings instead of assessment was proposed and discussed. The question was suspended, however, to be voted upon at the next meeting.

Freshman Class Elects Officers

The freshman class held its regular meeting Wednesday evening, February 21, in the students' parlor, Founders Hall. In the absence of the president, the vice president, Alice Thompson, presided.

Election of new officers claimed the attention of the class, and the following officers were chosen: president, Jack Harrell; vice president, French Smith; secretary, Anna Mae Fowler; treasurer, Gertrude Moore; marshal, Charles McDonald Smith.

After the election of officers, the meeting was turned over to the social committee and a delightful hour was spent in playing various games.
