BOTH SIDES

Who is Guilford College? We are; the students. If we cut the throat of the College, in the eyes of the public, then we are cutting our own throats. Good logic isn't it? Well, we haven't severed a jugular vein but there is a nasty gash on both sides (yes, men and women.)

What is it? Well, students it's just this—No hedging. At nearly every public gathering there are several men and women who persist in talking out loud (literally) or who take great pleasure, it seems, in starting a barrage of paper balls on somebody in another part of the room. There are some who even laugh or hiss when someone is performing. A concrete example you ask? Well, here goes. When Cecil Roberts, the noted English poet, was out here sometime ago, someone remarked that his lecture was rambling. But here is a statement which probably will show why his lecture was so disjointed. "I never spoke to such a discourteous audience. I couldn't do my best." The students and faculty at N.C.C.W. said that Mr. Robert's lecture over there was one of the best they had ever had—How can any man give his best here with such a disinterested audience?

And last week at the voice recital, who could sing with such a shuffling and mumbling going on. That night we had as our guest a noted English woman. According to one of the faculty members, who accompanied her to the recital, Miss Cramp was struck (down) with the conduct of the audience. "A whole shower of paper balls fell around us and on us and I was highly embarrassed."

Fellow students, what do these visitors tell about Guilford when they go to other colleges? Would you think it would be a very pleasant story? Mr. Roberts, the poet, told of his treatment at Guilford at a dinner in Greensboro and according to reports it was a screaming tale. What will this English lady tell when she visits other places? Fellow students, think! Do we want this kind of thing to continue? We have gashes on both sides, but these can be easily healed. However, if these cuts keep coming the jugular vein is liable to be severed. Then what! Our throats, yes, the throats of the college will be cut.

Let's change our conduct at public performances.

WHAT HO!

Another idea! Perhaps if the authorities would allow the men to (if they desired) remain in Founders for a few minutes after the evening meal and converse with the ladies there would not be such greed for conversation at public gatherings. We literally thirst for a few minutes to just stand around and talk. Yea! be friendly. We have made a slash at our throats perhaps this "Oil and wine" will help heal the gaping wound. Try it!! Why not?

THE PERISCOPE

Drake University will retain practically the same method of examinations in spite of various rumors that have been afloat. The only change made will be in Freshman subjects. An hour examination will be given at mid-term. This will not interfere with the regular term examinations.

GUILFORD CAGERS SPLIT EVEN IN LAST FOUR GAMES OF THE SEASON

time of the year by a score of 33 to 14. The first half started off as a fast contest but action slowed up a little as the Quakers gradually increased their early lead. The outcome of the game was never in doubt and never were the Lutherans in the lead. Brown for the mountaineers seemed to be the most consistent player. Moose and Miller were in good form. For Guilford Ferrell was the high scorer with seven field goals. His floor work was also of high order. The whole team played a good brand of ball.

SALISBURY "Y" DEFEATED

Guilford ended the basketball season by defeating the Salisbury Y.M.C.A. team 38-32 in a fast game. The game furnished a splendid ending for the season. It was fast and clean throughout. Ferrell and Frazier each played a good brand of basketball and each claimed six field goals. The floor work of R. Smith came up to his usual standard.

He is a double-eyed villain and a thorough rogue, but he is a gallant gentleman, for all of that. The observer regards him without rancor, and sees him, as he does the incorrigible Peter, as 'not wholly heroic' figure."

DAWNING

Outside the stars are shining,
Up in the heaven's own blue,
And in their light I am pinning
To stroll once more with you.

To-day the sun was bright, dear,
In the broad sky above,
To-day my heart was light, dear,
Resting in your love.

The nights have been so dreary, dark,
The days have been so long,
But after the night the call of the lark,
And after the shadow, the song.

After the shadows, the sunlight,
And in the morning, the dew,
And in the garden of the heart,
Love itself comes tripping through.

Here's one we heard over in Greensboro a few days ago:

John—"What do you say to a tramp in the park?"

Tom—"I never speak to them."

Sam—"So you're the circulation manager of the team? What do you do?"

Bob—"Why, give them the rubdown."

'27—(somewhat cagey)—168. Can't you do that?

'26—Certainly in time, but fools multiply rapidly.—Middlebury Blue Ribbon.

"Do you hear that?" asked the fair maid, as there came to their ears the sound of a heavy step. "It's father. Fly, sweetheart, fly."

"You mean flee," corrected the lover.

THE WAY OF A WOMAN

Jones, a gloomy individual, decided to turn over a new leaf so he went home whistling, kissed his wife and the kids, then proceeded to shave and clean up for dinner. When the meal was over, he insisted on washing the dishes and sang lustily as his wife looked on with amazement. The job finished, he took off his kitchen apron and found his better half in tears.

"Why, what's the matter, my dear?" he asked.

"Oh! everything's gone wrong today," she said. "The clothes line broke and let the washing down in the dirt. The twins got into a fight at school, came home with black eyes. Mary fell down and tore her dress and to cap the climax here you come home drunk."—Ex.
