 Vice-President Thomas Hadley
 Secretary Robert Ayres
 Assistant Secretary William Ward
 Treasurer Raymond Ebert
 Marshal Reuben Bundy

The absence of both the president and secretary necessitated action on the part of the vice-president and assistant secretary in the Websterian hall Friday evening, November 26.

The program was featured by a debate, "Resolved, that every male citizen of the United States should be required to have at least two years of military training." Alton Tew and Olin Sink affirmed this statement and propounded good argument, but the judges took sides with Loy Self and Paul Jassimides on the negative. The last number was a French duet by Robert Atkinson and Paul Jassimides.

Mr. F. P. Drake, a member of the board of directors of the S. A. Mullikin Company, was present and delighted the members with a talk on "Progress and the part that Guilford College students play."

The Zatasian Society hall was the scene of a beautiful, yet sad, negro wedding when Esther Hedgecock became the bride of Sarah Jinnette. Catherine Owen melodiously sang "Just Before the Battle, Mother," while Catherine Cox accompanied her at the piano. The bridal party entered to the strains of "Tramp, tramp, tramp." First came the minister, Lorena Booker, in his long tail dress suit followed by Lema Clinard as maid of honor; then came Mary Neal bearing the ring in a celery top. The flower girl, Ailene Pegg, came showering autumn leaves upon the bride's path. Next came the beautiful bride to meet her charming bridegroom at the altar, accompanied by Joe Beale as best man.

Rev. Booker used an impressive negro ceremony, with the groom saluting the bride.

After the ceremony the minister invited the guests to a reception given by the bride's parents, at which punch was served.

PHIL NOTES

President Chandos Kimrey
 Vice-President Annie Mae Newlin
 Secretary Doris Tew
 Treasurer Espie Neece
 Marshal Virginia Ragsdale

The Philomathean Literary Society discussed George Washington and Woodrow Wilson on November 26.

The first number was a debate: Resolved, that Woodrow Wilson did more for the welfare of his country than George Washington. The affirmative was discussed by Ruth Malpass and Gertrude Hire and Mary Pearson upheld the negative.

The second number was a vocal solo by Doris Tew.

In the third number, Kathleen Reynolds gave a very interesting talk on the education of George Washington.

The fourth number, "What the Wives of Washington and Wilson Contributed to Their Husbands' Success," was given by Hazel Zachary.

In the last number Mary R. Copeland gave a few bits of facts and humor in campus news.

Judge—"What's the charge against this lady?"

Cop—"She slapped a man who was proposing to her."

Judge—"Ah—contempt of court."

PLURALITY OF KEYS

FEATURES BALDPATE

The act progresses. The man is locked in an upstairs room. A young lady enters by the front door. A third key!

The young lady brings with her a chaperone enacted by Miss Farlow and Miss Myrick respectively. They explain their presence and Magee consents to their staying.

Then in rapid succession other visitors arrive. A fourth key, a fifth, and a sixth all yield their quota of visitors.

A murder has been committed at the Inn. Police officers arrive, the hermit hides the body, all are in a state of mental unrest for they are desperate. Two hundred thousand dollars are lost. The money is finally found but the body of the dead woman is still hidden.

Just on the stroke of midnight twenty-four hours after Magee starts writing his book Mr. Bentley calls up to ask whether the story is finished on time. It is done. Comedy, tragedy, humor, and pathos all make "Seven Keys to Baldpate" a great play.

Come and see the play and learn the intricacies of writing under pressure of outside noise and interruption.

off their feet. They began a passing game which sadly failed. Their fake plays were fairly successful, but on the whole their spirit seemed to lag somewhat. Guilford was not able to score, either, though they did come near the goal line a couple of times.

In the fourth quarter the fighting Quakers dug in their toes and scored another touchdown on a line plunge over center. Kimrey also made this extra point by a beautiful drop-kick. This quarter proved conclusively that Guilford's team was superior.

Much praise should be given the entire team for their excellent work. The team played as one man and showed the most consistent brand of real football of the season.

For Elon, Branner and Englebach deserve special mention. Branner showed himself to be one of the best ends the Quakers have been up against this year. Englebach saved his team mates from having a large score piled upon them many times by punting out of danger. His punts averaged about 50 yards.

Man-power

Four millions of the best man-power of Europe perished in the Napoleonic conquests. Military conquest is non-creative, while industry is always creative.

In the last ten years one American manufacturer—the General Electric Company—has created machines having a man-power forty times as great as that of all the lives lost in the Napoleonic wars.

In the years to come, when the college men and women of today are at the helm of industry and of the home, it will be realized more and more that human energy is too valuable to be wasted where electricity can do the work better at lower cost.

The laboratories and shops of industry are the sources of many of the enduring attainments of our times. In the General Electric organization is an army of 75,000 persons, co-operating to make electricity do more and better work for humanity.

A series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-18.
