We would like to reintroduce the 'Fighting Quakers.' Poor Catawba!

Rachel Parrish, Grott Hoyle and Marshall exhibited a rare brand of football Saturday and that is no reflection on the rest of the eleven.

We noticed quite a few High Point scouts at the game Saturday. Guess the out-of-state squad needed a little introduction, etc., being largely new in this locality.

Do any of the strong supporters of the present form of literary societies have an explanation for the fact that the freshmen are slow about joining? We do!

A student of Columbia University, and ex-faculty member, writes that 'the old form of literary society with debates is dead except in small southern colleges and in the Middle West. They have been superseded by open forums and parliamentary bodies.' (This was unsolicited.)

We Progress

At the present writing, Guilford students are enjoying the new and thrilling experiences of modernized rules. For one month the new plan will be in effect and after one month it will either be continued or recalled—that is up to the student body!

We believe that the student body of Guilford will prove itself worthy of the new code, which is largely the outcome of thoughtful work, under the leadership of Mrs. Andrews, dean of women, and Sallie Wilkins, president of the women's student government.

We believe that the student body will appreciate the fact that they are being treated like college students and will respond with a co-operative spirit. We hope and believe this.

One of the old guard professional grippers on the campus said today, 'Anybody that doesn't co-operate with those new rules ought to be shot. Soon we won't have anything to gripe about.' So even the irreconcilables are lining up behind what this paper believes to be one of the most far-reaching events of recent Guilford history.

Satisfaction of the student body is one of the greatest advertisements a college can have. Guilford, this year, with an excellent faculty, coach and dean of men and women, has reached the point where everyone is optimistic.

In the past, the faculty, the administration, the deans and the student government have never made the headway in the establishment of a sound social life that has been made in the one short month of the present school year. We want to express our appreciation for the influence and work of Mrs. Andrews.

A glance at the new regulations, which are published elsewhere in this paper, shows that good, sound judgment and not just a desire to have 'liberty' has pervaded the new trial plan.

Four years ago a student had one date a week with permission from the dean of women. But without permission we would hate to estimate the frequency.

In the course of four years these prep school rules have given way to college regulations. The result will be a saner social attitude on the part of the student body and there will be little to be regretted.

HAFIZ TO A GUILFORDIAN

(Apologies to R. Kipling)
My son, if the dean shall approach thee—
And 'tis not to comment on thy clothes,
But to ask thee, 'What hast thou been doing?'
Beware—for he probably KNOWS.

My son, if temptation assail thee
To pull a short date with thy friend,
Think well—for the pleasure is fleeting,
And a 'campus' is surely the end.

If thou cravest perfection in conduct,
Trust not to thine inner light.
It may shine where the law does not follow,
And not Good, but the Custom is Right.

Independence of thought is admired
In the prophet from over the sea;
But raising its head in the ranks
Is abhorred by the Powers that be.

STUDENT BODY HEARS MISS WILKINS SPEAK

though there may be less fanatics among the group.

Some students seem to have the idea that they learn everything there is to be learned while in college and that they have no need of further education after receiving their diplomas, but, the speaker concluded, 'We do not leave college as finished products, but rather as men and women in the making.'
