SENIORS HOLD EASTER BAWL IN CLUB ROOM

After Business Session Unique Party Is Held, the Men Entertaining With Feasting and Merriment

March 7.—Being the regular time for class meeting, the senior boys invited the senior girls over to the new boys' center, in Archdale hall, Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

A class meeting in a boys' dormitory seemed so out-of-place to the girls that some of them were a bit shy at first, in spite of their age and experience, but they soon recovered or forgot.

After the business meeting was over, the house was opened for a short social, the amusements of which comprised games, music and social chats.

At the beginning of the third part of the allotted hour each of the boys brought in his one pound contribution to the public feed trough.

MANAGER A. SCOTT PARKER

"Siki," or "Scotch," as he is sometimes called, was manager of the Quakers for the past season. It has been said that he was so tight that he would not permit the team to win a game by more than one or two points, and it has been proved that he ran over curbstones to save mileage.

THREE SHORT PLAYS TO BE DRAMATIZED

"Where the Cross Is Made," "Gains and Gains, Jr.," and "Agatha" Furnish Variety

INSTEAD OF SPRING PLAY

The Dramatic Council has announced the presentation of its new spring play, or rather, its plays, instead of play. An innovation and departure from the regular humdrum three-act play has been decided upon.

O'Neill's "Where the Cross Is Made" is a tragedy that should receive a warm welcome from the hearts of those who have been wearied by the endless repetition of the theme of the happy ending.

The Playmaker plays lighten the atmosphere and relieve us with soul-cleansing laughter. The whims and foibles of human nature are cleverly portrayed in them.

GUILFORD DEBATERS WIN FROM A. C. C. IN RECENT CONTEST

Teams Clash on Topic of Armed Protection of Citizens Investments in Foreign Countries

ROZELL-MACKIE DEBATE

Guilford's Gold Dust Twins Put Up Big Argument, But Lawson and Underwood Run Close Race for Decision

Guilford's long string of moral victories, extending over a period of three years, was brought to an end Friday evening when Mackie and Rozell, representing Guilford's negative, won a two to one decision over the affirmative team, Underwood and Lawson, from A. C. C.

The debate was one of the old-fashioned variety, each of the four representatives having a rebuttal, and was not patterned after the Oxford style, which the Guilford debaters had been working upon. This placed the Guilford men at a slight disadvantage, but the "Gold-dust Twins" were a hard combination to solve and more than made up for this handicap.

The query was, Resolved, that the United States should cease to protect by armed force its investments in foreign countries except after a formal declaration of war. The affirmative held that the United States was showing an imperialistic policy, was exploiting South American countries, and sacrificing human life, and introduced as a new policy, arbitration.

The negative, showing that the United States was acting for the best interest of the South American countries and that it was legally and morally bound

Guilford Experiments With New Curriculum

ENTIRE REVISION

Four-fifths of General Culture Course First Year Decreasing to One-Fifth in Senior

ACCENTS MAJOR COURSE

English, Math, and Language Elementary and to Be Prerequisites for Later College Course

By CLARE TRUEBLOOD

Many have been greatly interested in the various educational experiments now being carried on at Wisconsin, Rollins, and elsewhere, and now we are going to have the opportunity of witnessing one at Guilford.

During the last 25 years colleges as a whole have stressed the value of allowing the student the privilege of choosing his own courses, but in the minds of many eminent educational leaders this has become an exploded theory since it has failed in so many cases to train the student for a particular field or to help him realize the relationship between knowledge and life problems.

On the other hand some colleges are very arbitrary and compel the students to take a certain number of courses irrespective of their personal wishes, in a few instances this plan has worked,

MINNESINGERS ARRANGE SPRING SEASON TRIPS

Club With Varied and Novel Repertoire Promises to Be Best in Its History; Plan Tour to Eastern Carolina

PLEASANT GARDEN ON MARCH 16

The Minnesingers Glee Club is now ready for their season to begin. After several months of good work in club rehearsals a great variety of numbers is to be given in the program.

The club this year is doing the best singing that it has since its organization seven years ago. The parts are well balanced and the tone quality exceptional for untrained voices. The club numbers include sacred, secular, and popular songs. In addition to the chorus singing there are a number of solos, instrumental and vocal, a novelty number with costuming and lighting effects in which popular music is used, and also a quartette group which, too, will be given in costume. The whole program is worked out with lots of color and variety.

The next concert is to be given at Pleasant Garden High School on Friday night, March 16. Concerts will follow in various communities, two or three per week until the end of the season. Mr. Trivette and Mr. Reynolds left Thursday for a two-day trip through the eastern part of the state for the purpose of completing arrangements for the week's tour into that part of North Carolina. A second week-end trip will possibly be arranged through the western part of the state to be taken in April or the first of May.
