

THE GUILFORDIAN

Published weekly by the Zatasian, Henry Clay, and Philomathean Literary Societies.

Editorial Staff

Edited and composed by a few past, present and future members of the staff. Care has been taken to leave out enough of the conservative members so that if those higher up should show their appreciation of our genius by elevating us (via the drop-kick route) to positions in the cold, cruel world, there will still remain a few valiant souls to put out a nice, sweet, colorless, conservative Guilfordian for the rest of the year.

Business Staff

As usual, they are not responsible, for they refuse to be their brothers' keepers, though the Business Manager reluctantly admits that he will dispose of the extra copies of this odious sheet at the rate of 5c each or 3 for a dime.

If Ed Moore has to pass Botany before becoming a doctor he will never learn to take off bandages!

THE YELLOW FEVER heartily approves of the action taken by the faculty in allotting Director Noah a special period for his announcements. It will give him ample opportunity to impress us with the dignity of his profession.

It is odd how those who cease to toil for their daily bread become elevated. We understand Walter Robertson has joined the house of peers, formerly composed of Till Hurner, Alice Hazard, Grott Hoyle and H. R. H. Noah. We tender our sincere sympathy to the table waiters for the great loss they have sustained.

The Yellow Fever

In the spring a young editor's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of YELLOW FEVER. We say yellow because yellow is the color of suppressed desires. This issue will serve as an exhaust for the readers as well as the editors. We hope the public will be quick to appreciate our genius and comprehend our effort to get all the "gripe" out of our system at one time. We realize that we have deviated from the path of rectitude in the past but we have reformed and promise to be good children in the future and never, never think of adversely ing a dead literary society a political organization, etc. We will never, never thing of adversely criticising the perfect, harmonious, ever-helpful Girls' Student Government Association and we will henceforth support the efforts of our social liberators in their efforts for bigger and better tea-cups.

In other words, we will sugarcoat everything and compliment everybody, and if by chance a turmoil arises we will not even notice it, let alone write about it.

We nominate as a fit candidate for Morganton any individual or group of individuals who believe anything printed herein or take any of this long-suppressed news seriously. But if the shoe fits, buy the pair!

Smith for President!

The faculty action, unanimously upholding the candidacy of Al Smith for president, has the complete, unqualified, whole-hearted approval of this paper. He is the embodiment of all the priceless ideals in which we "live and move and have our being."

Al Smith is a man acquainted with grief and he has a wide, tolerant sympathy that commends itself to all good, righteous Quakers. His stand on race relationships is especially commendable, as he believes every negro should enjoy the priceless heritage of liberty, just so long as said liberty doesn't overstep what Senator Overman believes is essentially the rights and privileges of the white race alone—such as the right to vote and live in civilized countries. We contend that Governor Smith is the ideal man for president because he doesn't believe in the slogan, "Peace at any price," but is willing to spill a little blood for the preservation of the nation. Likewise, he does not favor allowing every wop and other Tom, Dick and Harry to enter our fair land and have citizenship conferred upon them.

The stand he takes on the 18th Amendment also endears him to the hearts of all loyal Guilfordians. Remember his famous words, "I'd like to get where I could put my foot on the rail and blow off the foam!"

Finally, we support him because he is a red-blooded, nail-twisting, glass-eating American, and we are glad to have our faculty concur in our opinion.

Guilford Did Not Burn the Heretic

Sometime ago, The Greensboro Daily News carried a news article telling of a certain Guilford College Student who risked going to jail rather than miss classes. We are re-printing herewith the remarks made by our friend, Dave Carol, of the Tar Heel. Dave expresses our sentiments better than we could ourselves.

"Requested to attend a session of court, a Guilford College student refused to absent himself from classes, even at the risk of going to jail. The Greensboro Daily News said so.

"Occasionally the Tar Heel publishes statements printed in other papers, but does not vouch for the truth of the news. This is such an instance.

"However, it would be useless to ask some Guilfordian to verify the report. In fact, perhaps this odd young man who dares to seek an education has already been lynched by an outraged campus of 'collegiates.'

"He would have been strung and quartered here.

"But if our Quaker friends, with a kindness which we could not muster, have declined to burn the heretic, he should be saved for posterity. University officials would be delighted to offer him free tuition for attendance here. And if he is an athlete, somebody might give him tuition, board, and spending money for taking in our tennis nets at night.

"It's not our fault. If the Greensboro paper had only reported that a college student went to jail in preference to attending classes, the associate editor wouldn't be saucer-eyed a-tall. But we'll tell you, men, when a modern college youth refuses to miss his classes in spite of a yawning calaboose, there's either a nigger in the wood-pile or a lady in the class-room."

OPEN FORUM

MORGANTON DUPLICATED

Fellow-students, a grave question has come up for our consideration. Is this famed institution for the dissemination of knowledge to become the standard of imbecility and the criterion of insanity? The affair referred to has been hushed up with the utmost secrecy, but TRUTH WILL OUT!

A few days ago, Viola Garner, a solid, substantial student, who had heretofore been considered one who possessed more than the atom of perception that an ordinary student should have, protested to Dr. Kressin, head of the Romance Language department, that she had been given entirely too much work to be done, that she had been whipped down to a nub by the inordinate demands placed upon her colossal intellect, and entreated, impertuned, yea! IMPORED him, to pare down his excessive requirements. Upon the refusal of said professor to do as she requested, we next have the picture of Miss Garner turning to satisfying thoughts of sweet retaliation, and embittered by the wrath of revenge, cunningly contriving the diabolical murder of the powerful Dr. Kressin. She cast herself in the role of the just executioner, plunging her poniard into the malignant heart of the professor, and thereby ridding the world of an inhuman monster. She was only prevented from carrying out this fiendish scheme by the slick sleuthing of Mr. Hill Turner, who, although he is modest about it, is a detective worthy of rank alongside of Sherlock Holmes and Hawkshaw.

As a result, Miss Garner is now being examined by a number of famous alienists and Padded Cell No. 13 is being prepared for her. But the important point is this: shall this institution of brotherly love and sisterly affection be made a safe harbor for flinty, hardened criminals? Fellow-students, rise up in the glory of young manhood and womanhood, and in justifiable wrath, smite down this deadly, deteriorating influence that has reared its repulsive head in our midst!

Sincerely yours,
