FREDERICK J. LIBBY TALKS ON INSURING NATIONAL SECURITY

Stresses Importance of Citizens
Demanding Acceptance of Kellogg Peace Pact

NATIONALISM HAS FADED

This Will Be Decisive Step Toward World Court, League of Nations and Better Foreign Relations

Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, addressed the student body in chapel Thursday on the problem of insuring national security.

In the great nations of the world there are two opposing factions—those who take the old attitude in regard to war and those who hope to secure peace by co-operation with the other nations. In France, Poincare heads the faction upholding greater armaments, while Briand is perhaps the greatest peacemaker in Europe. He believes that peace for both France and Germany can come only when each nation is willing to trust the other. Stresemann heads the German group which stands for peace. In England there is a group which wants to maintain a navy greater than that of America. Opposed to this group are MacDonald and Lloyd George, who are doing their utmost to prevent friction between the two nations. We have the power to unite the world against us if we build up our armaments. On the other hand, we can unite the world with us by co-operating with the rest for the safety of all.

MISS ELLEN STONE, OF GREENSBORO, IS HERE

Speaks to Members of Y. W. C. A. About Organization of Greensboro "Y" and Stresses Girls' Clubs

"Y" as an organization of national importance; the Greensboro 'Y' in its sphere of service, touches the lives of industrial girls in a way inductive to moral and educational progress," said Ellen Stone, industrial secretary of the Greensboro Y. W. C. A., Thursday evening in a talk to the Guilford 'Y.'

"In the United States there are 320,000 business girls whose lives are vitally touched by the 'Y.' They are given training along vocational and aesthetic lines. Through various programs and projects, worked out and participated in by the girls themselves, a real appeal is made to all types of girls.

"All the clubs meet once a month in a 'Blue Triangle League' and give a joint program. Recently what is known as 'fun night' has originated. On every Friday night the girls meet in their 'Y' hut for a good time in general. Horseshoe, basketball, and other games are thoroughly enjoyed.

"To assist those girls who receive low salaries, dormitory rooms are provided at small cost and through an employment agency those seeking work are often supplied with positions," Miss Stone told us.

The Greensboro "Y" keeps in touch with national proceedings by sending representatives to the national convention which meets every two years in Sacramento, California, and to the councils which meet on the intervening years to carry on the business of the organization.

More and more "Y" is entering the lives of the masses and making its influence felt upon the industrial and social world at large.

VAN DER VOORT CHOSEN AS RHODES CANDIDATE

Has Excelled in All Branches of College Life Including Studies
Athletics and Music

HE WILL MAJOR IN CHEMISTRY

Robert Van der Voort, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been chosen by the faculty as Guilford's applicant for the Rhodes scholarship. The qualities considered in awarding the scholarship are excellence in literary and scholastic attainment, qualities of manhood, exhibition during college days of moral force of character and, finally, fondness for and success in outdoor sports.

Guilford's applicant meets the above requirements, having been an outstanding man on the campus for the past three years. He is a member of the basketball and tennis varsity squad, has taken an active part in literary work, and excelled as a scholar. Mr. Van der Voort is majoring in chemistry and if chosen will continue his study in this branch of science.

Many attractive facilities are offered to members of Oxford University for work in chemistry, as vast sums have been expended during the past two decades in bringing the scientific aspect of university endeavor to a par with that long enjoyed, and justly so, by the humanities. The natural science school of Oxford University now ranks among the very best in the world.

Perhaps the outstanding members of the eminent faculty in chemistry are the Waynflete professor of chemistry, Wm. H. Perkin, Jr., and the Lee's professor of chemistry, Frederick Soddy; the former noted for his researches in the field of synthetic dyes and alkaloids and the latter for fundamental work

ART CLUB MEETS AT HOME OF MRS. DAVIS

Discuss Old English Costumes, Stressing Portraiture—Reading Concerning
Artist Reynolds

November 6.—The Guilford College Art Club was entertained at the colonial residence of Mrs. Henry Davis. The discussion centered about old English costumes and especially those decorated with pictures. In addition, a reading by Elbert Hubbard, entitled "Journeys in the Homes of Well-Known Artists," was given. It stressed primarily the life and achievements of Reynolds. It was encouraging to the club to note that almost the entire membership was present.

PRESS ASSOCIATION HAS GOOD SESSION

Guilford Sends Three Representatives, S. Parker, J. Cude, and James Harper

TO MEET AT GREENSBORO

The 18th semi-annual session of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association was held at Davidson College November 1-3. Three members of the Guilfordian board attended. These were Scott Parker, business manager of the Guilfordian and treasurer of the association; James Harper, associate editor; Joe Cude, sporting editor. It was voted at the last meeting to hold the next meeting at Greensboro College for Women.

The purpose of the association is to

ELWOOD COX MAY BE HONORED BY HOOVER

Mr. Elwood Cox, President of Guilford
Guilford Board of Trustees Is Staunch Republican Leader

SECRETARY OF WAR SUGGESTED

There is a possibility that J. Elwood Cox, chairman of the board of trustees of Guilford College, may hold a position in the cabinet when President-elect Hoover assumes office. The High Point Enterprise suggests that, as Hoover carried several of the Southern States in the recent election, he will in all probability, to maintain his hold on the South, pick at least one of his cabinet members from a Southern State. This paper goes on to suggest that Mr. Cox is probably the most logical person, both on grounds of ability and service, to receive this appointment and a columnist in the Greensboro Daily News suggests that it would be fitting to select the High Point banker as Secretary of War.

Mr. Cox has been for many years a staunch Republican leader in North Carolina. In 1908 he was the Republican standard-bearer for the governorship and furnished some very stiff opposition to his Democratic opponent. He was one of the original Hoover men and he organized the Hoover for President Club in N. C. long before the convention met at Kansas City. He also took an active part in the fall campaign, so if Mr. Hoover were to look southward for a member of his cabinet it seems possible that Mr. Cox might be seriously considered.

DR. ELBERT RUSSELL SPEAKS HERE SUNDAY

United States as Crossroads at Which Russia and Germany Have Stood;
Peace or Destruction

STRESSES PEACE PACT AND BILL

November 14.—Dr. Elbert Russell, of Duke University, spoke in the Friends Meeting House here Sunday morning on the great decision which the United States Senate must make when it meets next month, referring, of course, to the action to be taken on the Kellogg peace treaty. He traced the opportunities that other nations have had to outlaw war and showed how in each case they resorted to armed force and brought about their own destruction.

"Everything now hinges upon the ratification of the Kellogg peace treaty. This places America in the limelight with a chance to make a step which the world will gladly follow. We are now at the crossroads at which Russia and Germany arrived. We may take their path, which led to destruction, or we may blaze wider and more glorious path of our own.

"We must not vote a greater navy bill through at the same time we pass this peace treaty. Other countries will watch our navy. We are today hated,

GUILFORD STUDENTS AT QUARTERLY INSTITUTE

Dr. Raymond Binford Speaks—Quaker
Mission Pageant Presented Feat-turing Guilford People

The Yearly Quarterly institute met at White Plains November 10 and 11. It was attended by Dr. Raymond Binford, who spoke, and by a number of Guilford students, who presented a pageant on Quaker mission fields. John Hiatt represented and discussed Palestine. Mary Reynolds, dressed in a robe, sarape, and mantiella, presented the situation as it is found in Mexico. The African field was portrayed by Eunice Lindley, wearing a Margaret Parker nurse costume. Esther Lindley appeared as Jamaica. Georgia Fulk illustrated life in Cuban high schools. Home missions were cared for by Charles Coble. Posters and pictures were shown. Each speaker gave a short talk on the respective fields. The fact that there are about 76 Quaker missionaries in foreign fields was also brought out.

John Reynolds, Guilford graduate, has been attending these institutes, giving a lecture on the relation of music and worship.

WELL KNOWN PLAY, "ICEBOUND," TO BE GIVEN DECEMBER 10

The Most Difficult Play That Has Been Attempted Here in Some Years

ESTHER REECE HEROINE

Entire Cast Has Been Chosen—Prof.
Philip Furnas and Mrs. Max Noah to Coach the Work

The members of the dramatic council, after much consideration, have chosen for the fall production, "Icebound," a powerful drama by Owen Davis. This play, which is to be given in Memorial hall on December 10, promises to be a success in every way.

According to various records, "Icebound" has been a huge success where it has been given. This play has won the Pulitzer prize, which alone speaks for its popularity and fineness. It is by far the most difficult play undertaken here in recent years, and splendid acting is necessary for its success.

The scene of the play is laid in Maine. The time is mid-winter. It presents a picture of a type of people "isebound" in their hearts. The writer secures his aim of giving atmosphere by using the dialect of the people.

The cast calls for six boys and six girls. The roles are difficult as the characters all represent a type of people not found every day. Every one is of cold feeling toward the other, thus making the play have a decided atmosphere.

The following is the cast for the production: Henry Jorden, French Holt; Emma, his wife, Marie Barnes; Nettie, her daughter by a former marriage, Lena Farlowe; Sadie Fellows, once Sadie Jorden, a widow, Mary Lou Wilkins; Orin, her son, Carrie Teague; Ella Jorden, the unmarried sister, Margaret Reich; Ben Jorden, Stanley Moore; Doctor Curtis, Irvin Rosenfelt; Jane Bradford, Bunyan Andrews; Jane Crosby, Esther Reece; Hannah, a servant, Mildred Kimrey; Jim Jay, deputy sheriff, Calvin Wray.

Mr. Furnas will be assisted in coaching this play by Mrs. Max Noah.

EUPHONIANS GIVE MRS. NOAH SURPRISE SHOWER

New Members of the Club Are Fully Initiated, Each Class Giving a
Stunt—Refreshments Served

November 1.—Mrs. Noah was very much surprised when the informal party given at her home Thursday evening by the charter Euphonians in honor of the new glee club members developed into a miscellaneous shower for the director of the club.

Contrary to rule and to general expectations, the girls had kept their secret faithfully for nearly two weeks, so when they had all assembled around a cozy fire in the living room of the "ark" they could wait no longer. A dusky, buxom figure wearing a red bandana around her head and carrying a huge, well-filled basket on her arm, passed by the window and knocked at the door. In response to Mrs. Noah's questioning greeting, a voice replied in distinctly Southern dialect, "Tse jis' bringin' home dis week's washin'." The "washin'" turned out to be various and sundry articles of certain and uncertain use to a young novice at house-keeping.

While the excitement had not yet worn off, Misses Paul, Reece, Saunders,
