INCENTIVES TO STUDY

Curriculum, Scholarships, Honor Roll Incentives for Attainment.

Wilbert Braxton and Stanley Moore, of the classes of 1932 and 1929, have been awarded the Haverford scholarships this year. These scholarships, which cover expenses for one year at Haverford, are offered annually to members of the graduating class or to recent graduates of Quaker colleges.

Wilbert Braxton has distinguished himself at Guilford by his enviable scholastic record. But he has also entered enthusiastically into the life of the college for last year; he was awarded the William F. Overman scholarship, given to the junior who contributes most to the life of the college. By the way of athletics, he won the tennis singles in the North State conference last year. He was president of the Y. M. C. A., and edits this year's "Quaker."

Stanley Moore had also a fine record of scholarship. His outside activities were numerous: he was editor of the "Quaker" and a member of the student affairs board, the men's student council, and the dramatic council. His athletic activities at different times were football, baseball, basketball, tennis, and track.

For a number of years there has been a special effort to raise the scholastic standard at Guilford. Our curriculum is the outgrowth of this effort. The ideal of the curriculum is to couple specialized work in a limited field, represented by a course in a major, and related subjects, with cultural resources courses, including orientation courses and many others, whose object is to ground the student in the whole field of the liberal arts, to make him a well-rounded personality.

The Haverford and William Overman scholarships are incentives to raise the scholastic standard. The Rhodes scholarship is also used to stimulate scholarly interests. Work requiring research is done by the students of each class. In the freshman year it is the long term paper, the sophomores and juniors make ten to fifteen minute class talks, and of course the seniors write theses.

Outstanding juniors make chapel talks the last semester of each term. Although the results of reading for honors last year were not encouraging, with time this custom will undoubtedly become better established. The honor roll, with the more difficult requirements now applying, will give more distinction to the honor group henceforward. The chapel period Tuesday was given to a program for the honor students, and these twenty-four were each sent a letter from the faculty commending them on their work.

With all these incentives to attainment, it cannot be doubted that Guilford will have a better scholastic standard in the future, as the present standard is an improvement over that of the past.

MRS. CLEMENT, SOPRANO, IN RECITAL AT GUILFORD

Soloist in Greensboro Church Is Assisted by Mrs. Crawford.

VOCAL STUDENT OF MAX NOAH

Mrs. Margaret Crawford Clement, soprano, gave a fine recital in Memorial hall Wednesday night, April 13. Mrs. Clement is one of the soloists at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Greensboro. She was assisted by Mrs. Olive O. Chandley Crawford who is organist of the Church of the Covenant. The recital had added interest for the Guilford College group since Mrs. Clement is a voice pupil of Mr. Max Noah.

Mrs. Clement's opening number, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," from Handel's Messiah, was exceptionally well given. Other favorites were "The Wind's in the South," by Scott; "At Night," by Rachmaninoff; and "Moon Marketing," by Weaver. "Magic Fire," by Wagner, was the piano number which was most enthusiastically received.

feature, and a column, "Dot Dix's Gradmaw," a parody on Dorothy Dix's letters to the lovelorn. There are short editorials, an open forum, and sometimes cartoons.

The Forsyth county basketball championship has furnished the "Sedge Garden Hi-Life" with copy for the sports page. Sedge Garden has recently had a parents' day, when over 100 parents visited the school. King High School has won the Girl's basketball championship for Stokes, furnishing material for the "King Breeze." Another article in this paper concerned the senior superlatives, and was entitled "Who's Who."

Heavy editorials, of which we mention one on honesty, form and characteristic of the "News A X the Way" of Union Cross. "The Torch" of Clemens has the picture of a bucket above the title on the front page; in this bucket are put the complaints of the editor, such as a protest against destroying the newly planted shrubs on the playground.

Women on "Training for Marriage in College." She was also chairman of the resolution committee of the association. As president of the Greensboro branch of the American Association of University Women, she attended a meeting of the board of directors of the state association. Both Dean and Mrs. Milner took part in the recent social standards conference at the Greensboro senior high school, and they both also had part in a cabinet training conference of college Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s.

Miss Gail Wilbur, instructor in piano and public school music at the college, has been working all year with 29 grade schools throughout Guilford county on a music program which culminated in the county-wide music festival held last Saturday, April 13, at Guilford College. About 1,200 children took part in the affair.

Professor Algie Newlin, professor of history and political science, who returned last year from a two-year period of study at the University of Geneva, Switzerland, has given a number of talks recently, particularly on various phases of international relations.

Dr. Elwood C. Perisho, professor of geology, has given over 20 addresses before high schools in various sections of the state and has spoken at all the schools in Wilkes and Surry counties. Dr. Perisho recently gave the Founder's Day address at Greensboro College for Women, and a short time ago he spoke before the Brotherhood class at the Church of the Covenant and before the Gamma Sigma club of the Greensboro Y. M. C. A.

The new book Strike Injunctions in the New South, by Duane McCracken, professor of economics and business, who is now absent on leave, recently came off the press.

known for her interest and study in the field of literature and the other fine arts. Among her personal acquaintances she holds many authors and artists, including Sinclair Lewis, Otis Skinner, and Theodore Dreiser. She spends her summers in a New England artist colony, where she has an art shop.

Mrs. Canfield took her audience on an imaginative journey away from North Carolina to the beautiful old town of Concord, Massachusetts. She described in a delightful way the homes of Louisa Alcott, Emerson, and Thoreau, as well as other historical buildings, and read a number of poems to illustrate certain points. The interesting presentation of this subject with which she is so familiar made a deep impression on every one present.

In his 75 years Mr. Cox scaled the ladder of success from the bottom rung to the top and contributed more than any one other individual to the up-building of the industrial and commercial structures of High Point. He was a nationally known banker having filled many responsible positions during his life. His versatility led him to hold many important places in the state which could not have been filled otherwise.

You'll Be Contented in Hanes

HANES has plenty of what it takes to make really fine Underwear. You can see that, if you look at a pair of HANES Shorts. The material is color-fast. Rub it between your fingers. Stretch the strong elastic at the sides of the waist . . . give the seams a careful once-over. Pay particular attention to the wonderful workmanship and tailoring.

Try on a pair of HANES Shirts and Shorts. It's certainly a comfort to climb into HANES. The Shirts are light as a feather; and really fit your chest. They don't wrinkle like an accordion. Neither do the Shorts hike-up your legs, or cut and cramp the crotch. You can bend, twist, stretch, and reach—but HANES won't grip or rip!
