Guilford Loses Athletes And Campus Leaders To Army On March 23

The Enlisted Reserve Corps students of Guilford College have been notified to report for active duty on March 23, 1943, in grade of private, at Fort Bragg, N. C. On arriving, they will report to the Commanding Officer for processing and appropriate assignment to duty. The Classification Officer will receive a transcript of each reservist's college record.

Of the four seniors who are leaving, Knobby Blair, a history major, has been very active in sports and has won letters in football and baseball. Last year he was a member of the "Y" Cabinet, and on the "Quaker" staff, besides rounding out the bass section in the choir.

Dr. Furnas lost an English major and the football team lost another letterman in John Downing, president of the Monogram Club before its dissolution, and vice-president of the junior class last year.

Bob McNeely, an economics major, has been in the bass section of the choir for two years, and was a member of the Student Affairs Board for one year.

History major Sam Price was an Honor Roll student and was voted a college marshal last year.

The two juniors leaving at this time are Herb Schoellkopf, and Marion Ralls. Herb, another economics major, starred in football, basketball, and track, and also found time to edit the sports page of the "Guilfordian." Seniors In Armed Forces To Graduate

Knobby Blair, Bob McNeely, Sam Price, John Downing To Prepare For Degrees

At a special faculty meeting this week, the faculty declared that they were willing to cooperate with those students having senior rating who have been drafted or called in the Reserves, in working out an individual program for each one enabling him to complete the requirements for graduation without necessitating his return to college.

The purpose is to enable those seniors who lack only a few hours required for graduation, to receive their diplomas. As each student with senior rating is forced to leave, his problem will be taken up by the faculty.

Four seniors were among the E.R.C. men who were called this week. They are Sam Price and Knobby Blair, who are history majors; John Downing, an English major; and Robert McNeely, an economics major.

Practice Teachers Try To Mold Younger Generation

By PEGGY ELLIS, JR.

Those girls whom you see chasing around wearing hose and harried expressions in the middle of the week aren't plutocrats, silly—they are practice teachers.

Already these molders of youth are getting a taste of what molding the younger part of the generation is going to be like.

Mary Pitts tells the tale of a little girl who seemed to be toying with the cord of the shade. Suddenly the shade flew up with a loud noise and the students and Mary obligingly jumped. Mary reprimanded the child, told her to pull the shade down and not to let

Senior Thesis Subjects Reveal Varied Interests

By MARJORIE HOFFMAN

As Miss Lasley's deadline draws ever closer, most of the seniors are gripping their pencils and wrinkling their brows in an attempt to write a master piece of research for the benefit of Guilford posterity who will point with pride or awe at the bound volumes. Of course a few are still in the dark as to what they are doing research on and the ensuing discoveries.

On closer investigation I find that Maggie Townsend is doing research on a subject close to all of us—"Student Government at Guilford College." In order to get suggestions and criticisms, Maggie has written to members of the board of trustees, faculty, and student body. The consensus of opinion is that we should have more of a community government. Maggie has also looked into the student governments at Swarthmore, Antioch, and Talledega Colleges, and after comparing their governments, she will attempt to set up a perfect system for Guilford.
