Dr. Milner Leaves On National Tour Of Quaker Colleges

Plans to Speak at Eleven Quaker Institutions in Cooperation With A.F.S.C.

President Clyde A. Milner left last week for the Pacific coast on the first part of a tour of all the Quaker colleges of the United States. He will be gone throughout November, spending two or three days on the campuses of each of the eleven Quaker institutions scattered across the continent, speaking at chapel and student forums, meeting with administrators and faculty, and holding personal conferences with students.

Dr. Milner's trip is an outgrowth of a concern on the part of all the Quaker colleges for closer cooperation in matters of common interest and for the mutual strengthening of the roots that unite them in their Quaker heritage. His visits to the various campuses are expected to be followed by further steps toward collaboration among the institutions.

Dr. Milner's first stop will be Whittier College in California, where he will spend three days. From there he will go to Newberg, Oregon, to visit Pacific College. Returning through the middle west, he will visit Nebraska Central College, Central City, Nebraska; William Penn College, Oskaloosa, Iowa; Friends University, Wichita, Kansas; Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, where he himself taught for Roomie, do you expect to pass that exam tomorrow?

Huh?

Listen, get your head outta the funnies! Are you gonna pass that test? Sure.

How? You haven't opened a book since you started the course--Have you?

Well, I read the first chapter. I'm gonna stay up and cram.

I am too!

Yeh, ya know--I always fall asleep--howabout gettin' some coffee ready. Let's see, it's 10:15 now. We ought to start studying by 10:30.

Right. Is the water hot in the pipes?

Yes, but let it run a little while.

10:30

Ok., the water's hot enough now. Where's the coffee?

Try Sue's room, she had some last week.

Ok.

10:45

Here's the coffee. Roberta had some. How much shall I put in?

Oh, three or four teaspoons--This's got to be potent!

Yeh. Do we have any sugar?

Now, what do you think?

Library Selects New Books For Collection

New Works Include Novels, Histories, Autobiographies, Poetry, and War Stories

The Guilford College library has recently acquired over 60 new books which are now available to the students. Books on the war predominate.

The story of the battle of attrition at Verdun during World War I is set down in "Last War" which is from the cycle, "Men of Good Will," by Jules Romains. A famous Chinese-American, Lin Yutang, reflects on the period between the war and peace in "My Country and My People." One of the outstanding books by German exiles is "Exiled Pilgrim," by William Hubben, a former German Catholic teacher who is now an American Quaker and the editor of the "Friends Intelligencer." Gerhard Friedrich Writes For American Periodicals

For the fourth time in less than a year, the writings of Gerhard Friedrich have furnished material for the cover page of magazines.

The American Friend of October 21, 1943, features his "Flaming Symbol," which was inspired last fall by a gum tree on the Guilford campus. His "Ancient Christmas Greeting--II" appeared first on the cover of the Friends Intelligencer, dated Twelfth Month 26, 1942, and an issue of the same periodical, dated Second Month 27, 1943, presented on its cover a prose selection from the introduction to When Quakers Meet, and Other Poems.

An illuminated Pennsylvania-German Christmas greeting, which Mr. Friedrich had presented to the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation in Philadelphia, was reproduced on the cover of The American-German Review in December, 1942.

Mrs. Milner Reveals Plans For Post-War Education

By ANNE PERKINS

In a recent interview, Mrs. Milner gave her viewpoints upon the demilitarization and moralizing of men now in the armed forces. "There will have to be a gradual release of these boys," she said. "If all of them are released at once, there will be too many looking for jobs which only a few will obtain; walking the streets and standing in breadlines can result only in maladjustment."

Of those released, Mrs. Milner went on to say, the more able men, those with the desire to continue their higher education which was interrupted or blotted out by the war, should enroll in colleges, universities, and vocational schools, but guidance offices should be established to encourage and help men to select the schools and vocational training for which they are best fitted.
