

Quakers Walloped by Bears; Go to Catawba Tomorrow

Seek Upset Victory Over Indians

The Lenoir-Rhyne Bears, led by All-American candidate, Steve Trudnak, scored on the luckless Quakers at will, and when the final whistle blew, were ahead by a 33-0 margin. Led by Sam Venuto's running, the Quakers got as close to the Bear goal line as the twenty-four yard line, but lost the ball on downs.

The game was played before approximately five thousand fans in Hickory. It was the Bears' homecoming game, and Lenoir-Rhyne didn't disappoint her former grads. During the game, Bill Topping aggravated an old ankle injury and Ed Jones received a bad cut on the mouth, but it is believed that both will be able to play this week.

Tomorrow the Quakers tackle Catawba, and a win by Guilford would definitely knock the Indians out of the race for Conference champion. The game is to be played under the lights tomorrow night at Salisbury. Around the conference, the biggest game of the week is at Hickory where the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears play host to Elon's Christians. These two teams are now tied for top place in the standings.

Meanest Man of the Week

Our nomination for the Meanest Man of the Week: the guy who stole $8 of the campus chest funds from Bill Ringle's room the night of the Hallowe'en Dance. Whoever the thief was, he knew where the money was located, for nothing else was disturbed. May he spend it with good conscience!

The Guilfordian's . . . North State Gridiron Great

This week's All-Star is fullback Steve Trudnak of Lenoir Rhyne. He is a 20-year-old junior, 5' 10", and 190 pounds, from Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania.

Steve is being mentioned by AP for Little All-American. Leading the state in scoring so far this season with 70 points in seven games, he needs only 35 points in the remaining three games to set a new North Carolina collegiate record.

Against Appalachian he scored all of his team's 20 points. He has 22 of 26 extra points and eight touchdowns this year.

He is a very quiet, modern fellow, very likable. As mentioned in the Greensboro Daily News, he calls Coach Stasavich "Sir" and not "Coach."

ECC Tops Quakers After Coming From Behind

Although the half-time score was Guilford 14, E. C. C. 7, the lads from Greenville tied the score in the second half and then added another six pointer for good measure to put them on top by a score of 19 to 14. This was the score when the final whistle blew.

Guilford's two touchdowns came both in the first half. Venuto counted for one of them on a 30-yard run. A 76-yard run by Chuck Whitcomb on a pass interception was good for the other touchdown. This was the longest Quaker run of the year. Bobby Watson accounted for both the points after the touchdowns.

When asked to single out the outstanding stars of the game, Coach Maynard said: "There was no individual star. The team, as a whole, played their best game of the year. We should have won."

Wasps Conquer Quakers

The ever strong Emory and Henry Wasps bowled over the Quakers in a game played at Bristol, by the score of 35 to 6. At half time the score stood at 9 to 0, but in the second half the reserve-weak Quakers weakened and allowed the Wasps to score 26 points, making the final score 35 to 6. For the Quakers' lone tally, Carl Jones flipped a 25-yard pass to Nick Guere, who ran it for 30 more yards into pay dirt.

Coach Maynard singled out ends Topping and Whitcomb, Spencer, and Venuto as turning in very good performances.

The Athletic Federation of College Women, which holds its state conference every other year, met at Appalachian on November 3. Delegates from every woman's college in North Carolina attended to hear reports and to participate in discussion of W. A. A. problems. A group of Guilford women attended this conference, among whom were our official delegates, Jo Butner and Betty Venable.

In the W. C. Tennis Play Day, held October 13, Woman's College took first place with one defeat, and Guilford took second place with four wins and four defeats. Greensboro College placed last with one victory and seven defeats.

Spotlight on Sports

By BOB PAYSEUR - - - Guilfordian Sports Editor

The months of September and October of this year, 1951, brought to an end a great sports era. These months marked the retirement of two of the greatest sportsmen the world has ever known. When this column was written, neither of these all-time greats had announced his retirement—and may not announce it this year—but in all probability they will retire before another year. Two of the greatest, if not the two greatest, professional athletes of the past fifteen years, they both are living examples of a democracy at work. If you haven't guessed before now, they are Joe Dimaggio and Joe Louis.

Dimaggio was born in San Francisco just thirty-seven years ago. In those thirty-seven years he has risen from the unknown son of an immigrant to a living personification of the Great American Game. Baseball seemed to be in his blood. Even though his father did not see much sense to the game, he did not discourage his sons from the game. Joe and his brother, Vince, decided one day to ask the San Francisco Seals for a tryout. After peering through a knothole for several practice sessions, they finally got up enough nerve to ask for a tryout. Immediately they made a big hit, and soon Joe was in majors as understudy to the great Babe. Later on, his younger brother, Dom, followed in his footsteps and is still in the major leagues with the Red Sox. Fifteen years ago, how many people had heard of Papa Dimaggio and his three sons? Now, I dare say that if anyone in the United States has not heard of the Yankee Clipper, well, whoever it is—if anyone—must have been dead or asleep for the past fifteen years.

A truly great ring champion, Joe Louis, closed his career the same way he started it, with a knockout. However, this time he was on the receiving end. In his fifteen years of boxing, he was truly a champion—not only because of his magnificent record, but also for his clean sportsmanship. In his last fight, with Rocky Marcianno, although knocked down for the count of seven, and then in the same round out of the ring and out of the fight, he climbed back through the ropes smiling and shook the hand of Marcianno, the man who had brought his brilliant career to a close. Through his entire career his actions were similar. He never hit an opponent when he was on his way down, never took an unfair advantage, and was always a good example for American youth to follow. Yet Louis, probably the greatest champion the world has ever known, was born the son of a Negro tenant farmer.

So many times the things around about us are never missed until they are taken away. If only we can keep in mind the success stories of Dimaggio and Louis—how they rose to the top from the very bottom—then democracy cannot be overrun by Communism or any other such power.

Intramurals

By Howard Coble

The Whiz Kids, who reside within the ivy covered walls of Archdale Hall, whizzed through the first half of the Intramural Tag Football season with an unblemished 5-0 mark. The Kids have a well-rounded, power-packed squad led by Ray Schirmer who is the scoring leader thus far this season. This elongated, glue-fingered flankman seems to be a sure bet for all-campus honors.

There too, are others who have been outstanding on the gridiron this fall. Bob Crews, the diminutive ball carrier for the Old-North Old-South aggregation is the shiftiest runner in the local Intramural loop. Crews, who moves with success in either direction, has gained favorable comments from every coach in the circuit. J. T. Venable, The Center Section field general, is the most cagey player that occupied the gridiron during the first half campaign. Venable has developed the ability to successfully gain possession of his own kickoff by kicking the ball into enemy territory and recover the ball before his opponents do so. Venable's favorite play, however, is to draw the opposition deep into his own territory and then throw consecutive flat passes, thereby enabling him to cross the undefended goal line. Yes, all observers agree that Venable is an extreme strategist. Smoky Pegram, although one of the smallest lads competing in intramural play in the six-team circuit, is the most colorful player in the aforementioned league. "The Bassett Bantam" never stops hustling and he catches many passes that seem impossible to reach. Pegram also is a better-than-average passer. There are other stars who have been instrumental in their respective team
