SAC Rejects Wolinsky Trial Appeal

Largest Protest In History

Dissenters March For Peace

The Student Affairs Committee has rejected Robert Wolinsky's appeal for a new trial. Wolinsky, a student from New York, appealed an MIG conviction which sentenced him to disciplinary probation for the remainder of the semester.

Charges against Wolinsky stem from an alleged violation on Saturday of Homecoming Weekend.

According to the charges Wolinsky, a resident of Milner Dorm allegedly entered the parlor of a suite in the 1968 Men's Dorm with a freshman woman student from Guilford.

Although Wolinsky admitted the violation, he maintained he was under the impression that the dorm was holding "open house" at the time of the alleged offense.

Charges against the woman student were dropped by W.S.C.

According to reliable sources W.S.C. decided that signs should be posted in the future to prevent the reoccurrence of such accidental offenses.

WASHINGTON -- (CPS)-- Despite advance government predictions of widespread violence and the last minute cancellation of buses in some cities, the capital experienced the largest protest rally in the nation's history Nov. 15.

Exactly how big the massive crowd that gathered at the Washington Monument to protest the Vietnam War was is impossible to determine. Police Chief Jerry Wilson termed his department's estimate of a quarter of a million people as "modest." He added that it is impossible to tell the size of a crowd larger than 250,000. There are few precedents to judge by.

The New Mobilization refuses to estimate the crowd. But estimates have ranged as high as two million participants with various media reporting "more than a half million" and 800,000 participants.

In any case, it was by far the largest protest this country has ever witnessed, and that is the real news value of the day. Just two years ago the first Mobe march had slightly fewer than 100,000 participants. The previous record-holding Washington civil rights rally saw about 210,000 persons.

And while hundreds of thousands marched on Washington this Nov. 15, another 150,000 marched in San Francisco. That march and rally also was labeled the largest in the city's history.

Not everyone who wanted to participate in the Washington march up Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol to the Washington Monument could. There just wasn't enough room in the streets to hold them. After waiting for hours to march, thousands of persons had to walk from the mall to the monument only to find they could get within sight of the rally stage.

As Dr. Timothy Leary put it as he gazed at a crowd that stretched to the horizon, "One Woodstock, two Woodstocks, three Woodstocks. . . out of sight."

Persons of every age and every political persuasion participated. Viet Cong flags flew next to American flags. Mothers with children in their arms cried for "Peace Now" along side of Yippies.

And the collection of signs, slogans, and buttons showed their heads all together. They were for immediate withdrawal from Vietnam. Not President Nixon's "honorable," eventual peace, but peace now.

Shirt poster: "This is My Country" over a peace symbol on a globe.

Bumper sticker: "Vietnam: Love It or Leave It."

Sign: "Saturday Will Never Be the Same."

Student Is Trustee At Wake

James E. Cross Jr., a Wake Forest student from Burlington, was approved as a trustee of Wake Forest University by the Baptist State Convention at its recent meeting.

Cross, president of the student government at Wake Forest, is the first student to become an official, voting trustee of a North Carolina college.

Several institutions of higher education, including Guilford College, have students who attend trustee board meetings. However, none of these students have a vote.

Cross said he hopes to serve as a link between students and trustees.

He believes this would help trustees to better understand student problems, and to help communicate trustee decisions to the students at Wake Forest.

Dan Hulbert student legislature president, is a non-voting student observer on Guilford's Board of Trustees.

Elon College, in an attempt to get several younger members on its board of trustees, recently adopted a plan providing that each year a graduate from the preceding year be named to a two-year term on its board.

Consumer Supporter Nader To Speak

Ralph Nader, consumer advocate, will deliver an art series lecture December 4, at 8 p.m. in Dana Auditorium.

In the past several years, Nader has been involved in criticism of the lack of safety devices on automobiles, the danger of "black lung" to West Virginia coal miners, and the competency of the Federal Trade Commission.

Last January 2, Nader was appointed to the National Motor Vehicle Safety Advisory Council. His book "Unsafe at Any Speed" concerns traffic safety problems and automobile designs.

Nader is also responsible for the organization of a group of law students from Harvard and Yale Schools of Law led by University of Southern California Assistant Professor of Law, John Schultz.

The "Nader's Raiders" prepared a study of the Federal Trade Commission. On January 5, 1969 the study group charged the FTC with "incompetence" and demanded the resignation of Paul Rand Dixon, FTC chairman.

MINE WORKERS

Nader also worked with the West Virginia Black Lung Association in their attack on the United Mine Workers of America. The association charged that the union was doing nothing to protect miners from "Black Lung," or pneumoconiosis caused by breathing coal dust.

Recently Nader accused the Department of Interior of su-pressing reports that 1.7 million acres of land would cave in within the next thirty years if present mining practices were not reformed.

On August 6, Nader denounced the Occupational Safety and Health Board proposed by President Nixon, as being insufficient to protect workers from unsafe conditions.

Nader was born on February 27, 1934 in Winsted, Connecticut. He attended Gilbert School in Winsted before receiving the A. B. degree at Princeton and the L. B. degree from Harvard Law School in 1958.
