Bell Explains Housing Shortage

The housing shortage on campus this semester can be attributed to an increase in returning students, coupled with a decrease in the number of students living off campus, not to an unusual influx of new students, according to John Bell, Director of Admissions. More than six hundred students have re-enrolled at Guilford this fall, compared to five hundred and forty the precious year. Fewer of these returning students have been able to find affordable off campus housing than in the past.

Women's dormitories are particularly crowded due to a three percent increase in women students. Study lounges on Binford's upper floors are being used to house some of the overflow and single rooms for women are scarce. Floor interns are no longer assured of having private rooms.

In discussing Guilford's admission policy for 1974, Mr. Bell stressed that there has been no relaxation of entrance requirements. More applicants were accepted than in past years due to a higher percentage of those accepted choosing to attend other institutions, but Mr. Bell feels that only well qualified students were admitted.

Judgement of applications is based on what the individual is able to offer the college community and how well the college could serve the applicant's interests, according to Mr. Bell. The Admissions Office attempts to provide the school with as diverse a student body as possible. Recruitment of qualified minority group students has received additional emphasis in recent years. In Mr. Bell's opinion, Guilford's best selling points are strong liberal arts base and Quaker community. The Director of Admissions personally accepts or rejects most applications but refers borderline cases to the Admissions Committee for judgement.

So, if you find yourself living in a room with three other people, don't put the blame on the Admissions Department.

Personnel Reorganized

by Forrest Hughes

Have you noticed some new faces around campus this year besides the new students. If you have, chances are that some of them are working in the Student Personnel Office located in the basement of Bryan Hall.

There were several personnel changes made in this office as a result of the college's self-study conducted last year. This self-examination placed the SPO under particular scrutiny. The results were several new positions created and additions to the existing services offered.

Ken Schwab, named Dean of Students less than a year ago, has now been named Director of Student Services. The duties of this position covers a broad area. Schwab will coordinate the Student Service office and will serve on the Student Affairs Committee.

Newcomer Dick Coe will become Director of Placement Services on October 1st, leading the way for Dick Woodward to move into the newly created position of Director of Counseling Services. Last year Woodward headed both the Placement and Counseling Services.

Woodward's new job will also cover a wide range of duties. He will coordinate all of the counseling services, training people in human relations and work on tutorial and remedial programs. In addition, Woodward will continue to advise Black students.

The Office of Placement Services, headed by Coe, will be the place for students to file job resumes and the office will help them locate jobs. More information on this subject is available from Coe.

George Scholz, more familiar to people in Milner than elsewhere, is the new Director of Residential Programs. His duties will involve supervising the dormitories, and their staffs, and work on programs to designed improve living conditions. Also involved with administrative duties, Scholz will be in charge of student conduct and safety.

Edith Hester returns as Director of Health Services. Along with college doctor Jim Brewer, Hester will operate the infirmary located behind Bryan Hall in Frazier Apartment #33, expanded services this year include medical attention day or night.
