

THE STAGE IS SET !

Billy Whitley [32] takes handoff from Steve Watson [19] in last Saturday's 28-12 win over Emory and Henry. Whitley scored twice and rushed for 97 yards.

Guilford Smashes E & H 28-12 Big Bad Elon Is Next

by Steve Beck
Sports Editor

Guilford College's undefeated football team faces their toughest test of the season in Elon College here this Saturday in the Armfield Sports Complex. Kickoff is scheduled for 2:00.

With Elon coming up, coach Dennis Haglan has had little time to cherrish last week's smear of Emory and Henry 28-12. Following the win, the entire coaching staff to a personal look at the Christains as they came back in the fourth quarter to whip Savannah State 20-0.

What Haglan saw in Burlington was a Elon team with a lot of new faces on last year's N.A.I.A. runner-ups. One of those new names is quarterback Phil Bracco. A backup last year, Bracco moved into the starting role for this season.

If Elon has a weakness, it lies in their offensive line. Savannah kept constant pressure on Bracco for most of the game. However, the line blocking did hole up to enable the fourth quarter Elon scores.

Last Saturday's win over E and H brought out the best of the Quaker defensive unit. Mike Ribet picked off two passes and ran one into the endzone while the Human Eraser, Bunky James and Al Patterson were stopping the Wasp's rushing attack.

The Wasps opened up their offense several times by taking to the air until shut off in the second half. "It was simply a matter of repositioning our cornerbacks," Haglan explained. "Once we moved them on the outside of their wide receivers, we were able to shut off their passing for the most part," he said, after the game.

Fullback Billy Whitley, running like a miniature Larry Csonka, devastated the Wasp defense as he rushed for 97 yards and two touchdowns. "We were able to get much better angles on our blocks with Whitley running the ball," Haglan replied when asked why Whitley was called on for most of the running load and not Reggie Kenan, the Quaker's speedy tailback.

Red Wilson, the controversial coach of Elon, called the upcoming game as a tough one. "When Elon and Guilford meet, the game is always tough, no matter what the score is," he said Monday.

Wilson was asked what kind of Guilford team he would face Saturday. He said, "Guilford does not do very many things well, but what they can do, they use to their advantage.

"Guilford is much improved over last year, and their record shows that. "They have come a long way in instilling a winning atmosphere this year, and we expect a good game with them.

The game promises to fill Armfield to the brim. Elon radio last week called the contest, "...just like another home game for Elon." Guilford is expected to have its largest home crowd in many years. A Quaker victory could make or break the team for the season. Wilson knows this and Haglan knows this. All that is left to find out who wins on Saturday.

THE THREE EYED COW

by Nevets Kcep
The Great One

NORTH WILKESBORO - What am I doing here? Although I left with every intention of sliding on down to Pinehurst, the best laid plans... I spotted a waterlogged traveler somewhere between here and the edge of the New World Freeway on a rainy night, no not in Georgia.

He got in my Selby AC Cobra, and all he could say was "Nice wheel's man, my names Lugs, Lugs McGrafitly, but everybody calls me Pit Stop." We exchanged pleasantries, and naturally I asked him where he was going. "To see a three-eyed cow, man," he returned. I discussed the matter with him, just to make sure this character wasn't dipping in the catnip. So after a brief pitstop myself, I headed the AC towards the chicken capital of world-Wilkes county.

We got in a long line of traffic early Sunday morning just outside of North Wilkesboro. "Lotta people must go to see this three-eyed cow?" I said. "What, Oh yeah man," he acknowledged.

I parked the AC beside of a fine 5-6 Chevy, mudflaps and all. "Nice Wheels, man," Pitstop pointed out. "Yeah, only if you live in High Point," I muttered.

By the time we settled in our seat, I knew something was wrong. "This is a stock car race!" I exclaimed as about 1,000 very mean looking rednecks were zeroing in on me. "Musta come here the wrong Sunday, oh hell, lets watch the race and here, have a beer," was all he could say. So we sat and watched the race, drinking beer and griping about how few wrecks there were.

After about three hours of drinking beer, eating greasy hot dogs and many, many pitstops, everyone stood up and cheered. Like a little kid at a football game, I knew the race was over.

"Who won?" I asked Pitstop. "Hell, I don't know. "The guy driving the car that was painted like a beer can, I think," he said as he slipped and fell after stepping on a piece of Colonel Sander's chicken gizzard. "Wonder if there giving out free samples?" Pitstop finished and walked into a pole.

As we walked out of the grandstand two drunks stopped us. "Hey man, you want a

See Cow
Continued on Page Four

Booters Home Today

It is a common occurence for a team to schedule an opponent who will probably offer them the least competition of any other, as the first game of the season. But, it is not common, usually, for the second game to be played against the team who will probably offer the most competition.

This was the case of the Guilford College soccer team this year. The Quakers record stands at 1-1, after opening with an easy 7-1 victory over Greensboro College, and then being beaten 7-2 by perennial Atlantic Coast Conference contender, Duke University. The Quakers played well against G.C., but only well enough to win.

"We were nothing super, by any means," comments sophomore forward David Scott, "but we know we didn't have to be, and could probably get away with it. We're a team capable of scoring when we need to, and we did just that."

Guilford still wasn't in the form they would have liked to have been, as they lost to the Blue Devils. Outclassed is the only word describing Guilford's play.

The players were mostly philosophical about the defeat, many feeling that were if they had played to the best of their abilities, they would not have been able to beat a very good Duke side.

So, the rest of the season lies ahead. No more teams like Greensboro, but no more like Duke either. There is not an easy game ahead. The traditional grudge match against Belmont Abbey is in early October, later on, tough games with Pfeiffer, Elon and NC State have to be played. Atlantic Christian and UNC-G are going to offer stiff competition, while Guilford will be out to avenge last year's upset loss to NC Wesleyan.

See Booters
Continued on Page Four

Flag Football

After two weeks of competition, 2nd. South Milner has emerged as the team to beat in men's intramural flag football. Unscored upon in its first two outings, 2nd. South has defeated 3rd. Milner 13-0 and 2nd. North Milner 12-0. Fighting for second place are 3rd. Milner, Bryan, 2nd. North, and 1st. Milner, each having a 1-1 record. English stands in last place having dropped its first two games.	3rd. Milner	8
	Bryan	7
	Bryan	12
	1st. Milner	7
	2nd. S. Milner	13
	3rd Milner	0
	2nd. S. Milner	12
	2nd. N. Milner	0
	2nd. N. Milner	20
	English	7