

Fall Semester in Washington, D.C.

BY DICK COE

During the fall semester of this year four Guilford students were involved in a study/internship program in Washington, D.C. Internships are available in Congressional offices, Executive agencies, Public Interest organizations and Judicial agencies as well as in many other areas of interest. The students received 12 hours of credit as well as a tremendous opportunity to combine ideas, principles and theories obtained in school with practice in applied situations. The internships also provide students with an extraordinary opportunity for personal development with the wealth of political, historical, and cultural attractions available in the nation's capital.

The internships are being handled by Dick Coe, placement office, and a liaison person for the program, and Bill Burris, political science department. They have been developed in conjunction with

Awards In Security and Loss Prevention

Cash awards are being given by the A.S.I.S. Foundation, affiliated with the American Society for Industrial Security (ASIS), for the two best undergraduate papers and the top Master's Thesis written and submitted by students on a subject of their selection pertinent to the field of security and loss prevention.

Students in universities and colleges are invited to submit their entries for the following awards:

$300 Master's Thesis Award

This award will be presented for scholarly research and best thesis, by a Master's Degree Candidate (1976-77) on a subject relative to security and loss prevention.

$200 Undergraduate Paper 1st

This award will be presented for the paper the judges consider the most outstanding, by a registered student at a university or college in 1976-77, on a security and loss prevention subject.

$100 Undergraduate Paper 2nd

This award will be presented for the paper the judges consider the second best in the Undergraduate Paper competition as stated above.

the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives of Washington, D.C., a non-profit educational agency which develops the individual placements and provides internship, supervision, evaluation, academic courses, seminars, housing, and other support services for students from colleges and universities throughout the country. While on internship for a full term, students remain enrolled at Guilford and receive academic credit from Guilford based on evaluations performed by the WCLA staff and faculty in Washington in consultation with Guilford faculty.

The program is primarily for juniors and seniors. Students in any discipline may apply although some prior work in political science is advised. Currently Guilford can send as many as five applicants to the W.C.L.A. Interested Students should contact Dick Coe or, in his absence, Bill Burris. The deadline for application to W.C.L.A. is April 15.

Deadline — July 1, 1977

Entries for all three awards must be submitted by July 1, 1977. Only one entry per student will be accepted. The A.S.I.S. Foundation will retain the copy of entries submitted for its research library.

There are no limitations on length of theses and papers. Each must be the student's own work. Any published or quoted sources utilized in the preparation of the text of the entry submitted must be appropriately cited. All entries must be typed and accompanied by an abstract of subject covered in the thesis or paper.

A panel of judges, selected by the Directors of the A.S.I.S. Foundation will review the entries submitted. The award-winning students will be announced in the November 1977 issue of the A.S.I.S. magazine, Security Management. Each award-winning student will be notified by mail following completion of judges' evaluations.

Entries should be mailed to:

James Merritt Annual Criminal Justice Award

Five papers will be selected from those submitted. Their authors will present them at the Annual Meeting of the North Carolina Association of Criminal Justice Educators to be held in Boone, North Carolina, in October, 1977. Cash awards of $100, $60, and $40 will be given for first, second, and third place respectively. The winning papers will also be printed in the Association's Criminal Justice

Notes.

Papers may involve research on any criminal justice topic and employ the approaches of any relevant discipline (criminal justice, law enforcement, political science, sociology, psychology, economics, philosophy, etc.). Winners will be selected on the scholarly merit of their study. All papers must follow the form of an acceptable style manual (e.g., Turabian, Campbell, or the American Psychological Association Publication Manual). Proper documentation of sources and a complete bibliography are required.

An original and five copies of each paper must be submitted to Dr. Dennis D. Dorin, Assistant Professor, Department of Political Science, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Charlotte, North Carolina 28223, no later than September 1, 1977.

Tom Bernard has signed a contract with Oxford University Press to completely revise and update G.B. Vold's Theoretical Criminology. This book was originally published in 1958, and is still in print although it has never been revised. The original author is now dead, and the book is considered something of a classic in the field. The revision will entail writing over 200 pages of new text, as well as updating the existing text.

Dr. Robert Winokur from the University of New England biology department in Armidale, N.S.W., Australia will be lecturing in Room 122 of King Hall on Tuesday March 29 at 3:00 p.m. The topic of his lecture will be Evolution and Adaptive Modification in Reptilian Skin: Some Insights into the Structure, Function, and Evolution of Integumentary Specializations.

Attention all Biology majors - There are two more Senior Thesis Seminars scheduled for biology majors. They will be on March 30 in King 122 from 9-12 a.m. and on April 2 in King 122 from 1-5:45 p.m. These presentations are open to the public and biology majors especially are urged to attend.
