

Watchdog group plans for year

PIRG sponsors mock caravan,

Students from Guilford College, Duke University, and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro (UNC-G) will be sponsoring a "mock nuclear waste caravan" on Friday, Sept. 28, to attend the Barnwell II Energy Fair and Rally. Barnwell, S.C., is the home of three nuclear facilities.

The caravan will be originating near the UNC-G campus for a news conference to discuss the problems surrounding the transport of radioactive wastes through Greensboro and North Carolina.

The caravan will then move to northeast Greensboro along US 29, which is the waste shipment route, to leaflet the neighborhoods that lie adjacent to the highway, informing the residents about what materials pass near their homes and what the effects would be in case of an accident.

After the leafletting, the caravan will regroup near the Echo Disco parking lot at the corner of Spring Garden and Kenilworth near the UNC-G campus.

This PIRG-sponsored caravan will then travel along I-85 to Charlotte and connect up with members of the Charlotte-based Safe Energy Alliance (SEA). The "mock caravan" will proceed through Columbia, S.C. on route to its final destination in Barnwell, S.C.

For more information about the caravan and the Barnwell II Energy Fair and Rally, contact the NC PIRG office at 852-3811.

Guilford hosts PIRG board meeting

On Sunday, Sept. 16, Guilford College played host to the first NC PIRG State Board meeting of the 1979/80 year. Students from PIRG chapters across the State attended; these included Duke, Elon, Davidson, Wake Forest, and Guilford College.

The Guilford PIRG chapter was represented by Meg Horton and Suzanne Sullivan, co-State Board representatives. Also attending the meeting from Guilford were Bill Des Jardins and Mary Ann Cochran.

After the introduction of three new staff persons, two of whom, Art Donsky and Elisa Wolper, work out of the local PIRG office on the second floor of Founders, the discussion turned to the approval of the 1979/80 NC PIRG State Board Budget.

The budget covers expenses for the printing of publications and brochures, staff salaries and expenses, postage, office supplies, and expenses for the six local chapters. The budget was unanimously approved.

Jordan Fryar, the State Board representative from Elon College was chosen to be the State Board Chairperson for the upcoming year.

The highlights of the meeting occurred when the board representatives discussed the goals and plans for each of the chapters. Students from Duke University discussed their plans for a "Free University" in which students, faculty, staff or anyone who has some knowledge or interest in a particular subject, such as jogging or sign language, could submit a course description to a catalog and take it from there.

In the sixties, "Free Universities" were noted for their variety of subject matter and lack of tests, grades, or other traditional limitations.

The State Board also discussed holding a Media Workshop, to help students learn how to write news releases, hold press conferences, and other important duties.

The workshop is scheduled for the next NC PIRG State Board meeting on Sunday, October 14, in Laurinburg, NC, at St. Andrews College. All Board meetings are open to interested persons.

Why go to Munich next semester?

If an introductory science course, advanced physics, German history, German art history, a political science course dealing with the East/West political situation, introductory or advanced German, are in your fall semester plans, then for only the regular price of a semester at Guilford, and an additional two-hundred and fifty dollars, you can take a semester in Munich, Germany; and take all these courses.

Although the housing is scattered throughout Munich, there is a very efficient subway system which will bring a student right to the university.

In addition to Professor Adelberger there will be several German professors. They will be teaching the history, and political science courses. All classes, except for German, will be taught in English.

The group is tentatively set to leave around September 1980. Professor Adelberger prefers to have classes straight through library in Munich which students may use.

Good grades aren't a major criteria for being accepted into the program. Adelberger said, "I'd rather have someone with poor grades but an intense desire to see Germany, then someone with straight A's, and isn't sure why they are going."

Adelberger prefers to have registration completed by the end of the semester so that he can start having informal meetings to discuss what to bring, the exchange rates, and other information about the program.

Emphasis is not just on the course material. Stress will be to live the things that are learned in the classroom. Adelberger encourages independent study because it allows one to venture out into the community.

Anyone interested in going may obtain information from Professor Adelberger Ext. 279, or from the Center for Off Campus Education located in Frazier Apt. #21.

..... Semester in Europe-go for it!.....

All the courses offered meet core curriculum requirements. Classes will be set up for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesdays. The rest of the week the student may do as he or she so desires. Rex and Pat Adelberger should lead the group.

Classes will be held at the University of Munich. Housing will be with German families, and they will provide students with breakfast only. The students will be given a weekly allowance so that they may purchase for themselves the rest of their meals.

December, omitting a fall break. The advantage is that finals will be over by the first of December. The rest of the time can be spent touring Europe at one's own discretion. Everyone will return together.

There will be several planned excursions, one to Berlin. Students will be allowed to enter the occupied, eastern portion of the city. For many this will be the first excursion into a communist country.

Knowing German isn't required, but taking basic German is. There is an English

Rex and Pat Adelberger plan for a great semester in Munich, 1980.
