

Amateur Standing Professional Avality

Bill Brooks began his education and golfing career at Wake Forest University with the idea of playing and getting a good education. He went out for the golf team at Wake Forest and succeeded, however, in a year and a half at Wake, he did not get to play a substantial amount. Dissatisfied, Bill, who is from Siler City, NC, talked to a friend from his home town who was going to Guilford. From these conversations, Bill decided to transfer to Guilford. In the fall of 1980, his first year on the golf team here, Bill played exceptionally well, making All Conference and All District 26. In August 1981, he qualified for the U.S. Amateur, however he failed to make the cut. The disappointment from his inability to make the U.S. Amateur standing affected his game in the fall. Bill compensated for this in the spring however, with an average score in the mid-seventies.

Bill is also quite a scholar. He was an NAIA Academic All-American. He has 3.5 grade point average. Dr. Herb Appenzeller, Athletic Director, said, "He is one of the best student-athletes we have had at Guilford." Bill has in the past won the NC English Athletic-Leadership award. Looking towards the fall Bill thinks the golf team will be

Women's volleyball season is here once again, this year bringing back the Lady Quaker team in a different form than that of last season. This years squad is a much younger one comprised of five newly recruited freshmen and seven returning veteran players.

Head coach Gayle Currie's freshmen recruits are: Kathy Ball from Skyland, N.C., Suzanne Lowe from High Point, N.C., Kelly Carlton from St. Petersburg, Fla., Dana Cooper from Graham, N.C., and Melaine Bischoff from Mt. Kisco, N.Y. Currie looks to Cooper and Lowe to provide immediate help with strong spiking. Ball and Bischoff are needed as consistent hitters, with Ball also as a setter. Carlton will provide strength as a spiker.

Providing leadership on the court will be returning players Sharon Parks and Amy Parrish (co-captains), Jean Geiger, Teresa Arnold, Teresa Bonnsetter, Kris Schoolfield, and Kim Pearson who is a junior returning to the team after not playing her sophomore year.

Coach Currie looks to Parks to spark the offense for the Lady Quakers and also to Bonnsetter to batter the opposition with her power serve.

Looking ahead in the season Coach Currie feels that although the team this year is young, they have a definite chance at capturing the conference and district titles. Even farther down the schedule is the NAIA National Tournament. In order to qualify for the Nationals Guilford would have to win the district and bi-district championships.

The 1982 season will provide some tough and exciting competition for the Quakers. Guilford will be playing Lenoir-Rhyne and William and Mary for the first time. Guilford has already chalked up one win for the season against Catawba. The Quakers beat Catawba September 9 with a score of 16-14, 15-5, and 15-13. good and that many players are improved from last year. Coach Jack Jensen said of Bill, "He has proven in the past two years that he can play at any school in the state." The best of luck to Bill as he furthers his golfing career.

In 1982, Bill qualified for the U.S. Amateur again by placing second out of a field of 108 and was further distinguished by being the only player to make the field two years in a row. Bill shot back to back 70's, however, he barely missed being cut a second time which he attributes to the result of bad putting. When asked about his feeling about playing against his old school, Wake Forest, Bill replied, "I don't like them. I didn't get a fair chance to play while I was there," which suggests a personal as well as professional rivalry.

Fall Blazes With Soccer Games

The Guilford soccer team opened its season Monday, Sept. 5, clobbering Cawtawba College 6-0. The defensive cake was iced when after twenty-minutes of fruitless offensive efforts, freshman Steve Rubenstein hammered the lower corner with a left-footed blast. Minutes later, Roberta Sa, the recruited freshman striker from Brazil, rocketed one home from the eighteen.

Sa tallied a hat-trick by adding another two in the second half. David Hood and David Tunney, two of the tri-captains, and all-conference and all-NAIA District 26 players last year, netted the other goals.

The tide changed however on Wednesday when the previously outstanding defense was caught flat by the transuding offense of UNC-G. The sluggish, shut-down Guilford team allowed five goals in the first half. Coach Ray Alley summed it up: "The teams performance stunk; we didn't go to the ball and we lost the fifty-fifty's." The difference between the first half and the second half, he added, was that "we moved to the ball and gained possession more often."

The second half was almost a different game, as the Quakers netted two and shut-out their opponent. Hood's infamous world class free-kick, found its' mark from twenty-two yards: Sa scored on a penalty shot.

Since UNC-G is currently ranked third nationally in Division III NCAA, one might exclude Guilford from such recognition. On the contrary the implication of their performance and the 3-1 victory against eighth ranked Averett College is far-reaching.

An impressive game by sophmore goal-keeper Ken Goldwasser secured the defense, while tri-captain Chris MacBrien, T.J. Faherty, and freshmen Mile Jeglinski, turned the ball over at mid-field resulting in over thirty shots on goal. Jeff Polenchock placed a Faherty pass into the back of the net; Hood had already equalized with another blazing free-kick; Paul Gurspan headed home a Jeglinski cross.

The Quakers will need to prove themselves again and again as they have a tough schedule, playing two more teams ranked in the top 15 in Division III, as well as four teams in Division I: UNC, N.C. State, Wake Forest and East Carolina. The outcome in these games, however, is less important than their conference matches in the NAIA.

Although Guilford lost 2-0 to Atlantic Christian in the first round of the Conference playoffs last year, the crown could be theirs if they continue to play as they did on Sunday.

The majority of students on campus probably are not aware that there is a women's club soccer team at Guilford. Despite the lack of campus publicity, the team has not suffered in numbers. There are presently twenty-five girls on the squad, reports club President Mary Taylor. The vice-president is Mary Hildeman, the secretary is Debbie Chirtea, and the treasurer is Linda Thur. Alice George and Gwyn Tracy are co-captains.

The team practices two days a week from 3:00 to 5:00 and three days a week from 1:00 to 3:00 under the tutorage of Matt Burt and Steve Saltgiver, assistant coaches.

The games are played on Saturdays with the Quaker's first match of the season scheduled for September 18 at Guilford's Haworth Field. The Quakers go up against Warren Wilson College from western North Carolina. Go out and support the Quakers this Saturday and help to cheer them on to victory.

TO PROVE THAT THEY WERE MORE "MACHO" THAN THE FOOTBALL PLAYERS, THIS WEEK SEVERAL SOCCER PLAYERS SHAVED OFF THEIR HANDS. SAID COACH BACKSTREET, "YOU'VE REALLY GOT TO HAND IT TO THOSE GUYS. THEY'RE NOT TRYING TO PALM ANYTHING OFF. THUMBS UP, BOYS!"
