

Fall Courses continued

Synthesis of American Culture, Humanities 250 - (Gwen Reddeck).

Synthesis of American Culture for International Students is designed to provide an interdisciplinary overview and basic orientation to the American way of life. It is intended as an introduction to American social structure, institutions, and cultural experiences, rather than an in-depth study of specific courses which are available within academic departments. Efforts will be made to provide experience-based activities and will include the use of supplementary multi-media materials as well as guest speakers.

History and Philosophy of Oriental Science, IDS 401 - (William Beidler and Ted Benfey.)

A study of the paths Oriental People have taken to understand and relate to their environment. This will specially include the study of medicine, alchemy, mathematics, cosmology, metallurgy, and engineering. The

MENTAL forms CREATING, IDS 401/Psychology 450 - (Jerry Godard)

William Blake, poet-painter-printmaker, was a prophet, too. His creative visions of human nature are surprising in their anticipation of 20th Century imagery of the mind. With remarkable clarity and detail, Blake has anticipated the most important conceptions of Sigmund Freud and of the Freudian revisionists - Carl G. Jung and Otto Rank.

This course offers an introduction to the thought of Freud, Jung, and Rank, and a demonstration of its anticipation in the poetry of Blake. It requires no special preparation.

Texts include original writings of the three psychological thinkers, and Blake's poetry. In addition we will use a manuscript, Mental forms Creating: Blake's Anticipation of Freud, Jung, and Rank, written by the teacher.

course will involve student presentations seminar discussions, lectures and films. Individual student investigations are encouraged. Two papers and or projects will be expected.

Emphasis will be placed on China although Japan, Korea and India will be included. Can be credited to Non-Western requirement or IDS.

Justice Seminar

A statewide "Conference on Crime Victims' Rights" will be held on the Guilford College campus April 18, with speakers and participants from every segment of the criminal justice system.

Sherriffs and chiefs of police from across North Carolina will join state officials and community leaders for overview of the problems facing victims of crimes.

The conference, co-sponsored by the N.C. Department of Justice and Guilford College, is part of National Victims' Rights Week.

"The purpose of the conference is to inform citizens and professionals alike on progress made on victims' issues and to generate support for further improvements," said N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Guilford College President William Rogers in a letter inviting participants.

The conference, open to the public as well, begins in Founders Hall on campus at 10 a.m. with remarks from Congressman Robin Britt of Greensboro, who has expressed an awareness of the need for increased attention to victims of crime. Attorney General Edmisten, a proponent of victims' rights legislation, will give the luncheon address.

- 10:00 - Opening Remarks, Congressman Robin Britt.
- 10:20 - New Legislation before the General Assembly, State Senator William N. Martin (Guilford).
- 10:50 Crime Victims' Compensation in North Carolina, Representative Tom C. Womble (Forsyth)
- 11:20 - Victim Assistance and Prosecution, Wake Barber, D.A. (Orange-Chatham)
- 11:40 - Victim Assistance and Law Enforcement, Chief John Faircloth (High Point)
- Noon - LUNCH: Address by Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten
- 1:15 - Early Victim Assistance, Jan Keny, Director, Charlotte Victim Assistance Program
- 1:45 - Diversion and Victim, Julia Nile, Director, Greensboro "Turning Point"
- 2:15 - Probation and Victim Assistance, George Pettigrew, Branch Manager, Division of Adult Probation and Parole
- 2:45 - Recent Developments in the National Victims' Rights, John H. Stein, Director of Public Affairs, N.O.V.A.
- 3:15 - Summary and Conclusion, Professor Barton Parks, Guilford College Phill Lyons, Attorney General's Office
- 3:30 - Adjourn

John H. Stein, director of public affairs for the National Organization of Victim Assistance (NOVA), will talk about recent developments nationwide.

Other speakers on the agenda include State Senator William N. Martin (Guilford), "New Legislation before the General Assembly;" Representative Tom Womble (Forsyth), "Crime Victims; Compensation in North Carolina." Orange/Chatham country District Attorney Wake Barber, "Victim Assistance and Prosecution;" and High Point Police Chief John Faircloth, "Victim Assistance and Law Enforcement."

Also, Jan Keny, director of the Charlotte Victim Assistance Program, "Early Victim Assistance;" Julia Nile of Greensboro, director of Turning Point (for victims of child abuse, spouse abuse or rape), "Diversion and Victim Assistance;" George Pettigrew of the N.C. Department of Cor-rections's Division of Adult Probation and Parole, "Probation and Victim Assistance."

Dr. Barton Parks, chairman of Guilford College's Administration of Justice Department, and Phillip Lyons, N.C.'s Assistant Attorney General for Criminal Justice Affairs, will conclude the conference with a summary at 3:30 p.m.

In urging attendance, Edmisten and Rogers said, "The North Carolina General Assembly is actively considering several important victims' rights bills, including a victim compensation program, a victims' rights bill, and expansion of present compensation to cover assaults.

"We see this conference as a major event in educating our community and state about the issues involved."

Registration fee is $5, which includes lunch. For further information, contact Barton Parks at Guilford College, 292-5511.

From My Perspective

by Roger Pettingell
Ex-President, Community Senate

Many thoughts come to mind for my final column; in reflecting on the past year, I have learned many things. I had considered writing a "summation-type" article, listing the accomplishments of the Senate, etc., though now that Serendipity has come and gone, I have been thinking about many other things.

When I came to Guilford, I considered myself quite "open-minded." I was ready to learn new things, meet new people, and have new experiences. Those things have happened and continue to happen, and until a few weeks ago, I still considered myself completely "open-minded." Then my eyes were opened.

Until I began working with Serendipity I usually tended to consider "football players" as a group of people that one was unlikely to get along with. Gene Mirkin and I were in many binds throughout the weekend and without the help of "football players" (and others) we never would have been able to come through. I don't mean to write this column to boost those who helped at Serendipity (if I did, it would take up half the newspaper), but rather to say that I was enlightened by a group of people who I used to not understand and even fear.

I don't think I meant to have pre-conceived notions of anyone here at Guilford, I think I was merely ignorant. I think this is a common thing that most people experience. People tend to generalize about types of people and base their opinions based on their pre-judgements. I think this is something which everyone should make a conscious effort to avoid. I am glad I have overcome my problem; I have made several new friends because of it.

Good luck next year Guilford College - I'm gonna miss you!!!!
