

A Free Ride Job Fair Provides Opportunity

A summer job fair co-sponsored by the UNC-G JLD of office and the Bennett, Greensboro, and Guilford Consortium JLD of office will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 7 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Cone Ballroom of Elliot Center, UNC-G.

Representatives from summer camps, paid and non-paid internships, including spokespersons from the Washington Center, and local business and industry will be available to discuss summer employment opportunities.

Denise Nugent, JLD Director for Bennett, Greensboro, and Guilford Colleges, said that in addition to talking with representatives, materials will be available at various tables.

"Students should plan to spend some time at the resource tables.

Notebooks with various summer employment opportunities will be available for students to review," Nugent said.

Nugent also encourages students to allot themselves at least one hour at the fair and that they take notes from the resource materials.

A summer job van will transport students to and from UNC-G, free of charge. The van will run on an hourly schedule starting at 9:30 a.m. Students may board the summer job van at the back of Founders Hall.

Funding Facilitates Unique Concentration

GREENSBORO—The Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation has made a $34,200 grant to Guilford College for implementation of the College's unique democratic management program.

Under the grant, the College will offer four new courses in democratic management (also known as worker ownership or participatory management); will provide on-site educational workshops in worker-owned businesses; and will hold a national conference on democratic management for college educators.

The Babcock Foundation provided $40,000 in 1983 for preliminary work in designing a democratic management curriculum, creating a library, and research.

"Guilford College has taken leadership in developing an innovative management curriculum," said Guilford President William R. Rogers in announcing the grant. "The most recent feature of this work has been a commitment to the democratic management program.

"The Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, through its continuing support, has insured the success of this important effort, one that has far-reaching potential in the field of business education."

Guilford is the first college in the nation to offer an undergraduate concentration in democratic management of business and industry. Courses designed for the program, in addition to the required core management courses, include "Employee Ownership Alternatives," "Workplace Education," "Participatory Organization in the Public Sector," and "Conflict and Cooperation."

Who's Who In CCE

Fifteen of Guilford's Continuing Education students were nominated to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. They were chosen for their scholastic ability, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, citizenship and service to the school, and potential for future achievement. The honored students are: Carole Elaine Dabbs, Carol Ann D'Agostino Fama, William Harry Foster, Carolyn Berry Gordon, Glenn Thomas Hyatt, Harold Leroy Long, Francine Ann Maness, Richard Ronald Mangieri, Gail Gray Motsinger, Thomas Lee Noffsinger, Deborah Lynn Greeson Poole, Peggy Swift Tatum, Janel Beth Toff, David Wade Willard, and Sheila Hamric Wilson.

What is your opinion of the 1983 Quaker?

Alex Kish: I wish it never came out. My friends keep telling me they liked me better with curly hair. They say I look like a criminal now. I think I looked like a sheepdog back then. It's confusing—perhaps you can make it the topic of your next series of silly questions?

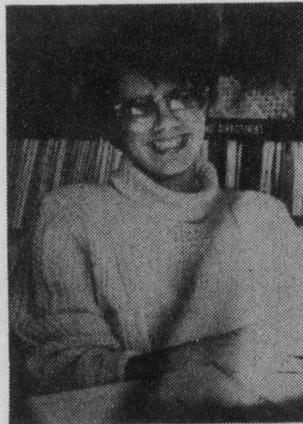

Jamie Hudec: "It was good for the price."

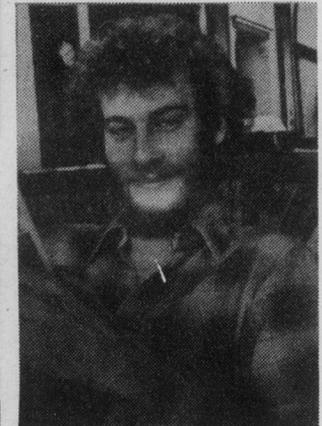

Robert C. Clark and John Motata: "It's more worse."

Scott Nixon: "It's alright, I guess."

Cindy Dieges: I know nothing about it because I've never seen one.

Tom Smith: It was unorganized. There were no distinct sections either. Was this a yearbook for the students or the alumni? Homecoming weekend got more attention than Serendipity or any of the sports. When did Cathy Gaddy graduate? Guess what, she was not a Sophomore last year. Let's hope this year's is better.
