Nights Take On Themes

When students return to school in August, not only will they be greeted by a brand-new addition to the cafeteria, they will also have the opportunity to participate in a new series of "theme nights."

"Theme nights" have always been popular, so from September until November there will be one each week. "At dinnertime, the dining rooms will be decorated along various entertaining and interesting themes, and the main course that evening will reflect that theme as well," said L. Iver Wurst, head of the Senate food committee, in an interview last Friday.

"In selecting the themes, our committee has tried to cover areas of interest to Guilford students. We hope to provide food for thought as well as food for the body," said Wurst. "We had a little trouble getting Doug to agree to some of them, but we reached consensus in the end." Next fall, the committee will begin the selection process for a new series of nights. Your comments and suggestions will be welcome.

- 7 Sept. Endangered Species Night of Don and Willie. They all refused to answer questions or else refused to meet with us. As more leads began to show up and there was still no sign of either of the students, we had a breakthrough.

Four days after the accident, someone finally talked. She wishes to be anonymous, but to prove she is a good source, we must say that she is the Academic Dean's secretary. This person said that for the past few days something had been amiss. She could not give particulars but said that for some reason, two students were being housed in the basement of Dana Auditorium and that a huge task force of doctors had been brought onto campus.

We immediately went to Dana but were not able to get past the front door, due to tight security. We tried to get into the building for two weeks and never could. But as can be seen from our list of sources we continued to search for the truth.

Luckily on March 14, Donald L. Kaplan and William S. Flash woke in their own beds and began going to classes again. We approached them and inquired as to where they had been for the last few weeks.

At first they were hesitant, but then finally they began to tell the story. They told how for two days they were kept in a freezer in the basement of Ragsdale and then taken to the hospital. They then said that they had been threatened with complete dismissal from Guilford if they said anything about the incident.

Of course this is only the tip of the iceberg; more of the story will come out when Guilford C. is taken to court for this atrocity.

The truth behind this saga will be uncovered and not covered up as the administration would have liked. The College is going to be looking at a lawsuit that could result in the payment of anywhere from 12.7 million to 23.9 million dollars. The court date has not been decided on yet and the two students are being housed off campus, having their work sent to them.

Thanks to the pictures that Ms. Hubbard took and the help of concerned citizens and students, a grave injustice has been averted. And hopefully one day, William S. Flash and Donald L. Kaplan will be able to walk down that stone and concrete path to their classes without feeling what is left of their bones ache because of the thought that on the walkway they almost died.

Tops Off In Grill Room

In yet another move to increase the ambience of the Grill Room, Do Barkley, head of the food committee, announced last Friday that beginning in August the evening Grill Room staff will go topless.

"Several years ago the Grill Room changed its format considerably, but now it's time for another change," Barkley said.

Additionally, every Saturday the Grill Room will feature live entertainment from 9:00 pm until 12:00 Midnight.

"We want to make the Grill Room more than just a place to go when you miss a meal upstairs. We want to make it a place where students can meet to socialize and construct meaningful dialogues about the burning issues of the day. Most of our entertainment will probably be topless dancers, since there are plenty of people on campus who enjoy taking their clothes off.

"When this gets really going, we hope to have as many as six dancers per week, three male and three female, so we'll have something for everyone."

Persons interested in applying for jobs in the Grill Room should apply to the food committee by Friday, April 20. All applicants for the 8:00-12:00 Midnight shift must schedule an audition when applying. Pasties optional. Work-study preferred.
