

Help Yourself!

Taking the lead from the infirmary's self-treatment program several places on campus are introducing self-help programs. When asked to comment, President Bill Rogers replied, "It's the Dickens, if you ask me!"

Convinced that Guilford's Honors system is observed on all fronts, Floyd Reynolds today proposed that students be permitted to grade themselves. The proposal, if adopted, will be retroactive allowing students to rewrite their transcripts.

In order to ensure that all students graduate within four years and correctly meet core requirements, Computer Services has organized a new adviser room, complete with terminal and printer. Advise yourself!

Dick Coe, confident in Guilford's ability to stay in the black, announced that students will now be able to bill themselves, leaving Business Office employees time for a longer lunch hour.

The Center for Personal Growth has implemented a new therapy, to replace long and costly visits to therapists. "You can do it anywhere," says Jane. "And never have to wait for an appointment." (Really, if you need help or someone to talk to, call the Center for Personal Growth at ext. 194).

Having believed in self-help for years, the Center for Career Placement & Development offered no new programs. They suggest that students continue to ask themselves two important questions, "How do I get there from here? Is this the fastest way?"
