

THE CAMPUS —TICKER—

Tampon Machines Coming

• The Senate Budget Committee announced that funding would be available for the purchase of six tampon/napkin dispenser machines. The machines will be placed in classroom/student buildings throughout campus.

New Linen Service Hours

• The linen service announced that once again it has adjusted its hours. The new hours are Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 3:50-5:50 p.m.

Publications Applications

• Students interested in 1991/92 editorships of the Piper, Quaker and The Guilfordian can pick up applications February 11-22 at the Founders Hall Information Desk. All candidates must have experience related to student publications, be a full-time student, and have a 2.0 minimum GPA. All applications must be submitted by February 22. For more information contact Vicki Lyall, Jacob Stohler, Betsy Vance or Larisa Hulnick.

Blood Drive

• The CCE/Student Government Association and the Student Union are sponsoring a blood drive at Sternberger Auditorium. Donors may register from 1-6:30 p.m. and staff will stay until everyone who has registered has had an opportunity to donate. The later hours are in response to complaints from both main campus and CCE students who were unable to donate because of heavy classloads.

The American Red Cross Blood Services System has been heavily burdened by the Persian Gulf war. The Carolinas Region of the ARC is supplying the military with 1,000 units of blood every week, and that figure will increase as the fighting escalates. This is in addition to the typical demand of 1,200 units per day for domestic health care needs.

Senate and Union Applications

• Those students interested in running for College Union and Community Senate offices who need a waiver of a required qualification to be eligible to run must submit an appeal by Monday, February 4 to the Student Affairs Committee. The appeals will be reviewed February 6. The deadline for filing a petition to run for an office is midnight on February 5.

should begin to organize their beliefs." Although the draft board is unlikely to give CO status to people that are opposed to war because philosophical, political, or personal morals and beliefs.

Max Carter, a CO from the Vietnam War, has started a support group for campus COs. The group meets in the Passion Pit every Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. and will be showing the movie "Weapons of the Spirit" this Thursday. The group has scheduled Bill Eagles, a conscientious objector who was sent to prison, to speak about his experiences on Thursday, Feb. 7. Anyone who is interested in finding out more about CO status, contact Max Carter, Joe Groves, Vernie Davis or Tim Snyder for more information.

with their feelings," he stated.

Rogers, as well as many others present, also indicated they were worried that negative stereotypes could stem from the war.

"I am concerned about prejudices and racism that may arise against Arabs or those who follow the Islamic faith," asserted Rogers.

No matter which position a person advocates in the war, Caris said that it is "important to be responsible for your responses."

At the conclusion of the forum, there was some conversation directed at how to stimulate a broader exchange of perspectives on the war. While this forum was billed as apolitical and designed to focus on essentially how the Guilford community was coping with the war, some people suggested organizing future debates and "learn-ins" to promote better understanding of the conflict.

After the forum, Rogers said he was pleased with the discussions.

"I think it was very constructive... I was also reassured we can deal with the issues of war and peace while still maintaining the integrity of the institution," said Rogers.
