cost you a fortune, but you will be reimbursed with those millions through a monumental reduction in the price of consumer goods.

Also, no longer will you be interrupted in the middle of Cheers for an advertisement. Also, those who don't watch any television would not be contributing to mass hypnotism every time they bought something, and would experience drastically reduced prices and no TV support payments. These lucky, TV-free souls, can spend their cash and time elsewhere. Ban televisions ads, at least for the freedom of those who don't wish to dish out thousands of dollars every year from their food budgets in order to support a company's commercials and the television station they don't even watch.

Ads thus perpetuate cycles which lead to ridicule, robbery, violence, addiction, and death—American people would certainly be willing to sacrifice these things for advertisers' freedom of expression.

The Guilfordian is looking for a Circulation Director:

Responsibilities include the direct implementation of a comprehensive circulation plan that would canvass the campus and possibly nearby businesses. Transportation helpful but not required. Job should require 90 minutes roughly each week. Perfect for individual who simply wants to join the Guilfordian family or has editorial aspirations and would like to become more integrated into the production process. Very meager salary compensated for by pleasure of spending time with Scott and Justin. Only requirement is that you know how to count.
