Cancer presentation to be held

A panel presentation, "Living with Cancer," will be presented in the Gallery, 7:30 pm, Monday, Mar. 1. Bill Burris, professor of political science; Carter Delafield, professor emeritus of English; Merry Moor Winnett, lecturer in art; Chris Gjording, professor of sociology/anthropology and peace studies; and Alan Kolp, pastor of First Friends Meeting in Richmond, IN, will share their experiences of life with cancer.

The presentation, sponsored by the office of Campus Ministry, is free and open to the public.

Dean's writing awards offered

The academic dean is again offering awards for superior writing done by Guilford students. These awards will be presented at the Awards Convocation this spring.

The Freshman Writing Award of $100 will be given for a submission in any field on any subject and may range from personal and original response to more conventional scholarly writing. The essays will be judged on clarity, sensitivity, and insight--criteria which are as appropriate to an autobiographical essay as to a critical exploration. They should display the usual coherence and logic of scholarly work.

The $50 Dean's Award for writing in aesthetics will be awarded to that essay which most elegantly and lucidly addresses, explores, and presents a specific correlation between form and content or form and function or style and content. Originality of perception and approach is encouraged.

The $50 Dean's Award for scholarly/critical writing in the humanities is offered to sophomore through senior classes.

There are two $50 awards for writing in the physical and natural sciences, one recognizing excellence in science writing for a general audience, the other for reporting scientific research which the author has done as a Guilford student.

Entries are due in Michael Strickland's box in Archdale by 4pm Friday, March 5.

Senator's Notebook

Senate Secretary Brian Sugioka

The Community Senate approved a constitution and a budget at the February 17 meeting.

The meeting began with executive reports from Jen Hill and Jamie Whitehead. Jamie reported that the town meeting has been postponed until the Sunday after Spring Break. Jamie reported that applications for Judicial Board are available at the information desk, and that Judicial Board interviews will be held on March 15-17.

The OUT (Over, Under, and Through) constitution was the first project on the agenda. It was asked whether OUT might be willing to do some fundraising to help with costs. It was also suggested that they talk to other organizations about the costs of equipment and possible fundraising ideas. The OUT constitution was then approved, with a reminder that approval has nothing to do with receiving funds from Senate.

The Tri-Beta Biology Club constitution was then discussed. The main question was the exclusivity of the club. The national organization requires that members have a minimum GPA.

The question was also raised as to why there could not just be a biology club, as opposed to a chapter of Tri-Beta. The Tri-Beta supporters at the meeting stressed that they are not exclusionary. They also stressed that is an honor to have a chapter of Tri-Beta at this school.

The question was raised about officers in the club, and also about the idea to allow those who do not meet the GPA requirements to join the club as associate members, with all of the privileges of full membership except that they could not be officers. It was clarified that people who are not members of the national Tri-Beta could be members at Guilford. No consensus was reached on this issue, so discussion will continue next week.

It was reported that the Women's Rugby Club had received approval from the Athletic department. Senate then approved the club's budget.

The next item on the agenda concerned the slate that had been found dumped in the woods. Jim Newlin explained that a lot of people wanted the slate from the former slate walk, and that was why it was placed in the woods instead of carted away.
