

Welcome to our rather anarchistic back page. It will consist of whatever you give us that is people-oriented, fun, artsy or random. At the bottom there'll also be something neat but you need to look down there to find out what.

Simple

by Amanda Cogar

So many things are simple
Relative subjective simple
Where time is no one's
And people walk simply
In shoes worth medical tests
And food for a year in Simple thirdworld hovels
Dark and simple and dead

I like what used to be Simple kind natural life
Now dead to most of a nation
Running in highest gear
Into a blank brick wall.

Past and Present

by Amanda Cogar

If not, what have they else
Than their goats and camels
And children, each tended
Herded and loved

If not, what have they else
But five loyal wives to protect
A flock of warmblood wealth
Browned skins and eyes

If not, what have they else
But compounds built with sticks
Not traiterons European blocks
That confuse permanence with stability

If not, what have they else
Than beads and feathers
Trinkets and treasures in spheres
Of two separate worlds

If not, what have they else
But the heartbeats and voices
Working, greeting, mending, loving Seeing each in turn as a value

If not, what have they else
Than those they can gather
To follow their people's history
With what is carried on their backs
