

Unmasking a different side of Guilford

BEN THORNE
features editor

Have you struggled in darkness, afraid to show your art to others?

Do you feel the need to communicate with people more intimately than possible in daily conversation? If so, then perhaps the lighthouse can guide your way.

The lighthouse, the literary magazine of Guilford College, will begin accepting submissions of poetry, prose, and art from all students starting Sept. 16-23. For veteran Guilford students it should be noted that a few changes have been made in format, and the lighthouse has two new editors, Courtney Crummett and Mollie Howey.

Both sophomores, this marks the first time either has worked for the lighthouse and they exude enthusiasm over their first issue. Crummett, the editor-in-chief, said "I wish more people knew and appreciated the lighthouse. I think it's important to express yourself and then witness it."

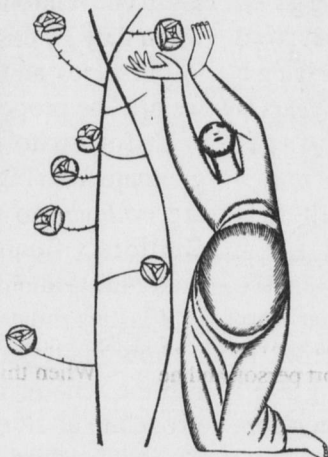

Howey, the art editor, is in charge of selecting and placing art in addition to helping Crummett with the magazine's layout. Art submissions became a continuing problem for the lighthouse, but Howey, an art major, hopes using her link with the department will encourage fellow artist's to submit art. "I'm doing this [editing the lighthouse] because last year it took them forever to put the magazine together. Since I'm an art major I can talk to Adele Wayman (of the art dept.) and call a meeting for majors" Howey said.

The biggest changes from last year include eight pages of art printed on glossy-stock paper, some appearing in full color, and a three-issue format. Also, an overabundance of issues was ordered last year, some of which are still lying conspicuously around campus. To correct this, Crummett and Howey intend to order fewer magazines.

Staff positions for the lighthouse, including advertising, layout, and selection are still open, so keep an eye out for flyers with more information, and remember that submissions will be accepted from September 16-23.

All ye artist's working in darkness, come, arise, and follow the guiding beam of the lighthouse towards recognition.

The President's corner

For the first two weeks at Guilford CHAOS reigned--now it's our turn. We'd just like to let you know what we've been up to so far.

Our first event this year was the Trent Graphics Poster Sale. Thank you to all the dedicated workers and even more dedicated shoppers for making the poster sale so successful. We hope all of your rooms are well-decorated.

Steering Committee has been hard at work pulling together the Senator elections that were held this past Monday. Thank you all, especially to our Vice-President Tay Stocks for her dedication to the elections. Also, thanks to all of you who voted.

We've also been busy recruiting students for the appointed Senate and institutional committee positions. For more information please call x2310.

We're looking forward to a fun weekend at Camp Raven Knob where we'll be getting acquainted, roasting marshmallows and doing other fun stuff.

Keep an eye open for ROCK

THE VOTE advertisements. Later this month, we'll be in Founders lobby helping students register and get absentee ballots for the national election on November 5th.

Our first official meeting will be Wednesday the 18th in Boren Lounge at 3:35 p.m. Please feel free to stop by.

If you have any questions, comments, concerns, ideas or if you'd like to help with ROCK THE VOTE or other Senate activities, call the Senate office at x2310.
