Sophomore Sarah Morris has been approved by Senate to take over the position of secretary for the second semester. Vice-president Tay Stocks, is going abroad next semester and secretary Adjowii Cooper-Henry has replaced her in the vice-presidency.

Sarah Morris

Morris, selected from six applicants, has not been involved in the Senate at Guilford in the past but is excited about her new position. "I knew that as far as personality, I could handle it. It was just a matter of learning the procedure," Morris noted.

During high school, Morris was involved with her student government. When she arrived at college, she looked forward to a break but decided this year that she wanted to get involved. After speaking with Molly Martin, Senate treasurer, about possible openings for the second semester, Morris decided to apply for the secretarial position.

Morris will have to resign from her current position as HOME president due to Senate policy. "I am sure that I will still participate just as much with HOME, just without the title," Morris added.

As for her goals, Morris is looking forward to increasing the communication between students and Senate. Morris said, "I would like to see people who don't usually get reached be able to readily access the information." She is open for ideas and would like student input on new approaches to communication on campus.

Senate president Steve Marasco noted his feelings about the new addition to executive council: "I am excited about Sarah being secretary and I am confident that she'll do a fine job. We are definitely going to miss Tay next semester, but I am excited that Sarah is getting this opportunity."

Alexis Lightwine, a sophomore whose integrative studies major focuses on communications, was one of six people nominated by Gavin for College Radio Music Director of the Year.

Alexis Lightwine

Gavin is a nationwide service, with approximately 75 member universities, that keeps professionals attuned to happenings in the radio industry. Lightwine's first year as music director for WQFS. Her tasks include listening to new CD's sent in by labels and distributing companies, setting up a rotation for the station, and keeping track of the WQFS Top 35.

The award came as a quite a shock to Lightwine.

"I was very surprised but very happy, especially because I stayed here all summer working for the station. Basically, I was doing the work of three people every day."

Lightwine hopes, with her integrative studies communications major, to pursue a career in broadcasting after college. Winning this award could help not only in her job search, but the school as well.

"I'd like to win—not only because it would look good on my resume, but it would be great publicity for the station."
