

Fearless Forecast

BY ADAM LUCAS
Editor-in-Chief

OK, so last week's record against the spread wasn't overly good. At least it's not like we switched the football and ultimate pictures or something. What? Oh, never mind.

Anyway, on to this week's games.

Wake Forest (+7.5) vs. Georgia Tech: We're going with the Demon Deacons every week until they prove us wrong. It's not like they have much of a homefield advantage, but maybe they can at least make it close against the Yellow Jackets.

Washington (-3) over Nebraska: I really think this is the year the Cornhuskers have to take their lumps. Maybe they should try to get a few guys out of jail or something.

Notre Dame (-2.5) over Michigan State: If Notre Dame hadn't lost last week, they'd lose this week. I know, it's convoluted logic, but what it all means is that they're going to bounce back with a win.

Penn State (-21) over Louisville: In case you didn't notice, Penn State has a mighty good team. The Cardinals were booed in their own stadium in the first quarter of their home opener.

Florida (-4) over Tennessee: To paraphrase Bobby Bowden, they're going to write, "But he played Florida" on Peyton Manning's tombstone. It kills me to do anything in favor of Steve Superior, but I really think the Vols have some sort of mental block about playing the Gators, especially in the Swamp.

ECU (-1) over South Carolina: Remember when the Gamecocks used to actually be good? Yeah, well that was a long time ago. ECU wins this one even if they don't get much out of star running back Scott Harley.

Women's Soccer wins tournament

All that practice paid off for the women's soccer team at the Sewanee Tournament

BY JESSE LAPLANTE
Staff Writer

Victory. Triumph. After a disappointing loss to start the season, the enthusiastic women's soccer team came back tough and won a major opening tournament at Sewanee University on the weekend of September 12-13.

Mental concentration had been cited as a major reason for the opening-day loss to Baldwin-Wallace last week. This was clearly not a problem for the team this week, as the Quakers played with emotion and concentration, defeating every team they played.

The Quakers traveled to Tennessee for the tournament on Friday, September 11. It would have been easy to excuse the Quakers to have been rough at the beginning because of the drive, but when the Quakers came out that Saturday, they were enthusiastic and ready to play.

The first unfortunate opponent to fall to the heated Quaker's maelstrom of soccer-playing fury was Principia College, who lost by a score of 4-1. Alison Schott and Ingrid Werge scored two goals each in that game to advance the Quakers to the finals against Sewanee on Sunday.

Schott continued her excellent performance on Sunday against Sewanee. Schott scored one goal and newcomer Liz Saintsing had one as well lifting the Quakers to a 2-1 victory.

Head coach Ken Glardon was pleased with his team's success. He said, "I think having a more aggressive offense, helped push us ahead."

Sophomore forward Ingrid Werge attributed the team's success to high intensity, and looks forward to keeping that intensity up all season.

Star Alison Schott, a junior, explained that not only the offense, but the team as a whole is very strong. "We have a lot more depth this year. Every position on the field is filled by a strong player."

The Quakers continue to push on, hoping that they'll be able to keep the intensity high and the victories even higher. They look forward to this weekend, when they will face both Randolph-Macon and Greensboro at home.

Some Of Our Pizza Toppings May Seem A Little Square.

Welcome back, and have a great year!

- Excellent part-time jobs
  - 150 fresh toppings
  - Incredible award-winning pizzas
  - Amazing lunches

We didn't invent pizza...it just tastes that way.

4508 West Market Street • Greensboro • 854-3555
3700 Lawndale Drive • Greensboro • 282-9003
LIMITED DELIVERY AREA.

PieWorks.
PIZZA BY DESIGN