

Task Forces

moving too quickly and that it would be wiser to go slowly and make more careful decisions. Many others feel, though, that it is vital that the process move as quickly as possible.

"With all the uncertainty right now, people are nervous," said Dan Poteet. "As long as we don't make mistakes, it will be better to reach a conclusion quickly so the college can move on."

The most important thing is that the process is not secret. Members of the Guilford community are welcome to contact the members of the task forces with their opinions. Don McNemar, in a letter to the Guilford College community, wrote "Everyone in the community has ideas and experience to contribute, and I am urging the task forces to consult you both formally and informally."

TASK FORCES

I. Curriculum Task Force

Charge: Propose a curriculum which integrates the five principles adopted by the faculty in 1994 and information technology.

Coordinator: Jeff Jeske, jeskejm

II. Academic Structure Task Force

Charge: Propose an academic structure that integrates departments, programs, and concentrations to implement the curriculum.

Coordinator: Richie Zweigenhaft, zweigenhaftr

III. Adult Market Task Force

Charge: Propose Strategies by which Guilford can serve the adult education market.

Coordinator: Raymond Johnson, johnsonre

IV. Schedule and Calendar Task Force

Charge: Propose schedule and calendar which enable successful teaching of the curriculum and implement separation of schedules for day and evening classes.

Coordinator: Marlene McCauley, mccauleyml

V. Community Task Force

Charge: Propose steps to integrate student life and academic program, including transition in and out of Guilford and strengthening the community

Coordinator: Max Carter, carterm1

VI. Marketing and Advisory Group

Charge: Propose steps to make Guilford familiar to people throughout the country

Coordinator: Jack Zerbe, zerbejs

VII. Revenue Enhancement Advisory Group

Charge: Recommend new programs and strategies which can enhance the revenue in addition to tuition and gifts.

Coordinator: Lynn Mosely, moselylj

President's Corner

◆ Students invited to come and make their voice be heard at weekly Senate meetings

BY MOLLY MARTIN
Senate President

Occasionally, someone says something to you that just clinches everything you've been thinking and feeling. Today, while chatting about everything that's happening right now at Guilford, David Grimsely summed it all up for me.

"There are so many people here who have romantic ideas about Guilford. I think that's what I like best about it. Sometimes I get the feeling that if Guilford needed it, there would be a giant bake sale."

Amidst all the changes, I feel it's easy to lose sight of that romanticism. And it makes me sad that David's statement may no longer be totally true. Would any of us sprain our wrists making Rice Krispy Treats for Guilford right now? Or are we all too busy wondering about OUR room getting cable? OUR meals tasting like Mom cooked them, not Marriott? OUR departments being modified or cut?

I'm not asking you to abandon the things you care about, but look outside of your own wants and needs.

I'll climb off of my soapbox for a second to congratulate some people who want to work for Guilford to be a better place. The Senate elections boasted a voter turnout of 270 students on Monday. Congratulations and thank you to all who ran!

The opening Senate meeting was held Wednesday at 3:35, getting off to a busy start with security discussion; club constitutions for Choir Club and the Scrabble Club; committee recruitment; and a question-answer session with Adele Wayman, Don McNemar, and Jeff Jeske.

Thanks to Steering Committee and the new senate for a successful opening. We look forward to great non-senator turn-out EVERY WEEK on Wednesdays at 3:35 in Boren Lounge. We need every voice we can raise!

Hobbs Kitchen continued from page 1

Greensboro can require structural changes such as electrical and plumbing repairs when work begins on the kitchen.

The initial Hobbit reaction was angry. Signs even went up on the front door of the dorm registering Hobbit complaints. As second-year-Hobbit Cam Eubanks said "We take care of our messes. So we don't need new carpet and furniture all the time. I understand this year, because so much money was put into other things but we've been ignored if you look at the history of things. We've been cleaning that carpet for years."

Workchecker Allison Mower pointed out that the school is saving money on Hobbs but not willing to invest any into it: "Do the math. We work 2 hours a week multiply by minimum wage... but we only save $60 a semester."

Other Hobbits also mentioned the new technology put in place over the summer: "They spent all this money putting in little silver boxes in the rooms but I can't afford to use them. I can afford to use our cafe but they don't spend the money on it," said Jamie Brown.

Many students who live in other dorms feel Hobbits are whining and already have a better dorm than do they. Eubanks' response was "We're not angry anymore. It's an issue of equality on campus and we're not just bitching."

Currently Hobbits are working to raise money from Hobbs alumnae. Mary Hobbs Hall Council President Shivangee Dalal said she had spoken with Leslie Daisy from Institutional Advancement about establishing a Mary Hobbs Restoration Fund.

Many Hobbits feel that the fund-raising process is bringing them closer to one another but they worry about the long term negative effects on the Hobbs and Guilford Communities.

Hobbs Cook Lois Conrad, who currently prepares the vegan bar in the main cafeteria, sees the importance of the Hobbs kitchen as "the atmosphere at Hobbs with me and my girls. We're like a family. I give them the same advice I would give my own child."