Corrections

•The Muzak Theory picture in last week's issue should have been credited to John Gilchrist.

Perfection is our goal, but we don't always achieve it. The Guilfordian strives to correct all errors, so please contact us at x2306 if you see a mistake.

Our circulation goal is to have a paper under the door or on the desk of every person on campus by noon on Friday. If you do not receive your paper, please contact the publications suite at x2306.

Faculty

Some also worry that the membership of the task forces is not representative enough of the faculty as a whole to make good decisions. As mentioned before, Kathy Tritschler worries about the fate of her department.

"My biggest concern is that the area of sports studies is so poorly understood as an academic discipline by the vast majority of my colleagues," said Tritschler. "People who do not fully understand a department or program are going to have a hard time finding the right place for them in the curriculum."

Groves feels that even though the criteria for task force membership stated that the task forces would be "inclusive," dissenters have been left out. "Faculty members perceived as critical were excluded. When you exclude the critics of a process from the process, people who have the most serious questions are not given a structured way to participate."

Most of the dissenters, even with the concerns they are expressing, want to cooperate.

"A lot of us who are critical of the process and deeply concerned about the level of faculty cuts are still trying to work as constructively as possible with the process," said Groves.

the Guilford community. He graduated with a degree of economics in 1963 and served as a member of the Board of Visitors between 1976 and 1979. He has also acted as class reunion chair and Loyalty Fund chair. He remains a member of the Friends of the Guilford College Library, Heritage Society, Friends Center, and Quaker Club. The Alumni Association honored him in 1994 with a Distinguished Service Award.

McNemar bid him farewell saying, "I will miss his vision, leadership, and energy. Members of the Board of Trustees and the Guilford community join me in thanking him for the many contributions he has made over the past 15 years."
