McNemar announces departmental changes most students, so even with the letter, the new implementations were hard to understand.

Surprises take place at Guilford College every day, and this one is one of the big ones.

A couple weeks ago, President Don McNemar sent out a letter to students that stated that there would be some more changes made to the curriculum.
According to the letter, the music major will be eliminated, the certification of sports trainers will be discontinued, and the education studies department will have three tenure-tracked professors instead of the previous four.

Yet, most students had no clue that this was going on.
The letter was also somewhat vague to

As students wonder about the origin of this plan, many are curious as to where this decision will leave Guilford students.

"The end result was the best decision to serve Guilford students well," said McNemar. Guilford students should not worry too much about completing programs that they are already in, though, because, according to McNemar "everybody here will be able to finish the major they have already started."

Many people have asked who Single ticket uncontested in bid for Union office

From Staff Reports

This year's Union elections mark a return to normal.

As in year past, there is only one ticket running for next year's Union top seats. Sara Hahnel, Kemba Bloodworth, Michelle Simmons, and Kirsten James are running for President, Vice President, Treasurer, and Secretary, respectively. Running uncontested doesn't seem to bother them, though. "If somebody else was really interested, they would've formed a ticket," said Bloodworth.

Dawn Watkins, Director of Student Activities, is very excited about the ticket.
She is looking forward to working with them.
"[Union] had a strong year of events with strong chairs. We're going to try to get the entire group working together rather than individually next year," said Watkins.

Even though the ticket formed at the last minute (the petition deadline was extended in order to get the ticket together), the four are excited about working together more.
Hahnel served as Union's vice president this spring after returning from Guadalajara.
Bloodworth was the Spirit Activities chair.
Simmons and James have both attended Union events but have not been members of Union.

"We want to have a more diverse range of activities," said Bloodworth. "We want to increase the amount of rap, reggae, and latino bands we bring to campus. There's also been a decrease in the amount of movie tickets and outings and we want to increase those." Bold plans for a new year.
