Duke Hall actually named after David Duke

The administration revealed this week that Duke Hall is actually named after southern white supremacist David Duke and not longer James and Benjamin Duke as it previously led on. In a press release, the college announced that "a secret underground division of the Ku Klux Klan thrived at Guilford College in the mid-1950's, and it had a lot of sway. They were able to rededicate it without much fuss because everyone kept calling it by one name." The release explained that the building, formerly called DuBois Hall, was then renamed and christened with bottles of Klan-favorite Tab.

Left: Duke Hall has puke-green carpets to encourage in-class discussion. Right: Don't ask why he's holding a pen or asleep on the Pub Suite couch. Below: Why wouldn't you trash these dorks' common room at their party on Friday, March 29?

Student steps in goose crap, goes back to bed

Sam Stephens, after struggling out of bed Tuesday morning at 11:10 a.m., stepped in goose crap on a campus walkway on his way to class, and decided then to return to the safety of his bed. "When a day starts that badly, sleep is the only answer," Stephens said. "The day would have gone downhill from there had I stayed awake. For all I know, the professor might have called on me in the class if I had gone." Stephens said he then slept through most of the afternoon and "woke up just in time for a wake-and-bake at 4:20."

Administration closes Caf dessert bar; campus women protest, hold vigil

A coalition of female students, faculty and staff staged a silent protest and nightlong vigil following a stunning administrative action to increase enrollment.

Last week, head administrators drove a forklift into the Caf and permanently removed first the ice cream freezer and then the cake, cookie and pudding trays.

Those administrators, including President Don McNemar, Randy Doss, dean of enrollment, and Phil Manz, chief financial officer, left behind a large poster explaining the reasons for their actions.

"This dessert area has been removed as an affirmative action to decrease the tendency of females to match or even exceed the 'freshman 15,'" the poster reads. "We are looking to change that figure to a more modest 'freshman five to 10.' With slimmer, more attractive women on this campus, more males and lesbians will want to attend the college."

The coalition of women, who call themselves the Paunchy Ice cream Extremists (PIE), immediately formed ranks and camped out in the lobby of Founders Hall, brandishing signs that read "You Can't Take Our Chocolate" and "Civil Rights Means Ice Cream For All."

It was a silent protest until one female got up and gave an impassioned speech about the importance of dessert in her life and the life of every woman she knows.

She said: "When we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every patisserie and every ice cream parlor, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's women, girls, and other dessert lovers, will be able to join spoons and sing in the words of the old Desserter's spiritual, 'Chocolate at last, vanilla at last.

No more scoops for Jeffica Jeske!

Thank God Almighty, ecstasy at last."

The administrators have refused to comment on the issue, but they did release early figures that indicate this move has generated significant male interest in the college nationwide.

Bryan suite gets vitamin endorsement deal

Suite B12 in Bryan recently signed an endorsement deal with vitamin company GNC to help sell their new line of vitamin B-12. They were reportedly paid in cash and beer. Junior Eben Dennis was thrilled. "These free samples of B-12 they gave us are going to do wonders to help me prevent anemia and maintain a healthy nervous system," he said as he took a drag off a cigarette and mumbled something about some wild party the suite is having on Fri., March 27.

certed effort toward easing the transition. "We had to move fast, because it takes a long time to remove four tons of independent punk albums," said Dan Thigpen, who will become the station's general manager this summer.

"I'm glad that QFS has decided to make this change, just in time for Serendipity," said senior Dain Roose-Snyder. "I think the new music will definitely add to the celebratory atmosphere of the weekend. Now we can just blast the radio at Friday's quad dance instead of hiring a DJ."

President Don McNemar also sounded thrilled with the idea. "You know I'll be listening," he said.

WQFS, as a result of the programming switch, will move from 90.9 F.M. to 106.7 F.M., the appropriate easy listening/new age area of your radio dial.
