Congressman Brad Miller discusses genocide in Darfur

By Deena Zaru
SENIOR WRITER

On Nov. 26, Democratic Congressman Brad Miller, who holds the seat for North Carolina's thirteenth district and is the husband of Guilford Alumni Board President Esther Hall '74, spoke about the genocide in Darfur in Bryan Jr. Auditorium. The talk was sponsored by the political science department and the College Democrats.

Miller's discussion consisted of three main parts. First, he educated the audience about the history of Africa and the causes of the genocide. Miller highlighted the conflicts over scarce resources, mainly water, between the Islamic tribes, who mostly raise crops, and the Arab tribes, who are more pastoral and herd animals for a living.

In order to control resources, the Arab tribes are led by "the Bashir regime, which is one of the world's most repugnant regimes, sponsored by the janjaweed Arab militia and the Sudanese government's military," Miller said.

After losing six out of eight children to AIDS and being left to care for a husband with an amputated leg and four grandchildren, three of whom are HIV positive, Josephine Namutebi or "Jaja" still is said to be the life of the party.

Jaja is one of the many members of BEADFORLIFE, a group of women who are from Uganda. Living within a world of constant poverty, AIDS, and war, these women have defied the boundaries of their struggles and found a way to support their families by making beads.

BEADFORLIFE was just one of the tables where one could purchase numerous items made directly from the artisan at Guilford's Shopping for Change event which was held in Sternberger Auditorium on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

"I figured it would be great to have an event where everything that people bought, they felt that their money was going to good use," said Director of Interdisciplinary Leadership for Social Change Judy Harvey, who initiated Shopping for Change

NEW GREENSBORO MAYOR

Keith Holliday '75 moves on

By Sean Urquhart
STAFF WRITER

After eight years of service to the city of Greensboro, mayor and Guilford graduate Keith Holliday has hung up his hat and called it a day. Yvonne Johnson, long-time city council representative and Greensboro's first African-American mayor has taken the helm.

Holliday graduated from Guilford in 1975 during a turbulent time in American history: The Vietnam War. His experiences here changed him forever.

"If you would of told me I would one day be mayor of Greensboro, I would have said you're nuts," Holliday said. "I would never have thought about being that institutional. Even back in high school I was always in trouble," Holliday said with a chuckle. "Guilford set the stage for my whole attitude, it raised my conscience level far beyond any other college would have."

Born in Greensboro to a conservative Quaker family, Guilford was an eye opening change for Holliday. "I remember on my first day freshman year I saw an interracial couple

Federal agents place secret tracking devices on phones

By Joanna Bernstein

According to the Fourth Amendment, probable cause is required to acquire any type of warrant.

But recently, federal judges have been granting government officials permission to order wireless communication companies to place secret tracking devices in the cell phones of people whom the government believes to be drug traffickers, fugitives, and child abusers without necessary reasons for conviction.

Probable cause refers to the standard by which a police or government officer, official, or judge has the right to make an arrest, conduct a personal property search or grant/obtain a warrant.

"Specifics necessary to establish probable cause such as relevant dates, names and places have been missing in agent
