VOLUME 95, ISSUE 7 // OCTOBER 24, 2008

LE GUILFORDIAN

GUILFORD COLLEGE // WWW.GUILFORDIAN.COM // GREENSBORO, NC

Trustees address budget issues in first meeting

By Esta Broderick STAFF WRITER

On Oct. 2-4, the board of trustees met for the first cal year. The committee meetings covered investments, advancement, academic affairs, buildings and diversity.

Considering the financial crisis that America is in at the moment, the one question on everyone's mind is in many different funds the state of the endowment and is managed by a comportfolio.

time for the 2008-2009 fis- lion dollars just at the be- fall with the markets. The ginning of this week, but it diversification is a strategy will go back up. The funds to protect against any spegrounds, Quaker life and Bryan Jr., chair of the board all invested in only one inof trustees.

The endowment is held prehensive long-term plan, "Well, we lost three mil- so it is expected to rise and are all in long term stuff and cific industry loss that could well diversified," said Joe happen. If the funds were dustry, such as the financial

SEE "TRUSTEES MEETING" ON PAGE 2

In their first meeting of the 2008-2009 school year, the board of trustees revised the budget and presented ideas on managing the endowment portfolio.

Clearing the air about Guilford's smoking policy

By Mara McLaurin STAFF WRITER

With more and more colleges in the area going smoke-free on their campuses, Guilford is tightening its reins on the current smoking policy, while looking to College. students for input about the will soon join future of Guilford's smoking Guilford policy.

The idea of non-smoking areas on Guilford's campus seems almost imaginary based on the steady trail of cigarette butts. Guilford is one of the few colleges left in the Greensboro area that is not a completely smoke-free campus.

The Tobacco Use Prevention Coalition of Guilford County and partnering organizations have seen great strides taken to expand tobacco-free areas on college campuses.

"Not only have we expand- co-free college campus: ed our reach into surround- Bennett College for Women, ing counties and campuses, offering protection for nonbut we have seen 100 percent smokers and incentive for tobacco-free policy announce- tobacco users to quit," accordments at Greensboro College ing to a publication from and Guilford Technical

the Tobacco Use Prevention

First-year Malcom Gardener smokes a cigarette in a restricted area.

STUDENTS GIVE BACK OVER FALL BREAK

By Kylie Gilliams STAFF WRITER

We gathered at the Hut on a murky Sunday morning and piled sleepily into two white vans. Fourteen hours later, we had crossed five state lines and watched the city lights of New Orleans sparkle as we passed over before descending into Jean Lafitte, Louisiana.

Hello, fall break. The work trip had be-

The group was made up of 20 Guilford students, Guilford staff members Tom Coaxum and Frank Massey, one high school student and 10 members of the North Carolina Friends Disaster Service (FDS).

There were fewer people than on previous trips I've been on and that created an

SEE "WORK TRIP" ON PAGE 7

(Above, from left) IFP Gifts Discernment Coordinator Frank Massey, FDS volunteer Dwight Osborne, CCE sophomore Michelle Grisaffi, Director of Institutional Research & Assessment Thomas Coaxum (inside house), and sophomores Zlatana Nenova and Tawana Manyukwi work to rebuild a home in Jean Laffite, La. over fall break.

Nearly $400,000 discovered from left-over student activity fees

By Jasmine Ashton STAFF WRITER

"At the end of last year, a bucket of money was discovered that had been collecting for years from left over Senate money," said Senate President Joe Pelcher at the Sept.

24 Community Senate meeting fund consists of all money held in money to be spent on permanent scheduled to discuss a policy to access the $359,421 discovered at the money will not be abused."

The "bucket of money" Pelcher refers to is the rollover fund. This would require all rollover fund the student general fund that is left over from the current fiscal year. end of last year. "Tonight we want These funds come from the portion to come up with a policy so that of student tuition reserved for student activity fees.

The initial policy proposed on-campus projects that benefit the entire student body. It would also require all future projects to be approved through unanimous consent, and drawing no more than 20 percent of the total fund per academic year.

Many senators, however, held issue with some vagueness within the initial policy.

Early in the meeting, several students including senior Sara Eisenberg were concerned by the loose

SEE "ROLLOVER FUND" ON PAGE 3