NEWS

City considers reopening White Street Landfill

GSO DEBATES COST OF LANDFILL, RESIDENTS EXPRESS WORRY OVER IMPACT ON COMMUNITY

> By Keyla Beebe STAFF WRITER

The White Street Landfill, Northeast located Greensboro, was closed over five years ago to save residents from odor, traffic and buzzards. Met with community opposition, the Greensboro City Council has recently proposed reopening the landfill in order to save money.

In 2006, after years of lawsuits and protests from residents, the landfill closed its facilities to household trash.

SEE "LANDFILL" ON PAGE 2

The White Street Landfill was closed over five years ago to improve life in the surrounding neighborhoods but the Greensboro City Council recently proposed to reopen it in order to save money.

FEATURES

Students present PPS projects, compete for prize

Junior Graham Bryden, of the project titled "Reaching out to the Stars and the Community using Radio Astronomy," sits next to a TV showing a webcam image of the radio telescope on top of Frank Family Science

By Meg Holden STAFF WRITER

the line, 10 students work to furiously to polish their and projects to perfection before isn't a new game show and it's happening now.

Guilford Undergraduate Astronomy," and "Rooting Symposium Small Group Project Challenge, the competition involves three groups of students who have researched, designed, With a prize of $1,000 on and implemented projects Guilford improve Greensboro. Now, the groups will present the judging is finished. This their projects — "Access Everywhere: Handicap this is the GUS Challenge, Accessibility on Guilford "Reaching Campus," Officially titled the out to the Stars and the Principled Problem Solving Community using Radio

SEE "PRIZE" ON PAGE 8

IAF community organizer hosts activism talk

GERALD TAYLOR ENCOURAGES STUDENT ACTIVISM, STRESSES COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

> By Amanda Dahill-Moore STAFF WRITER

"The real question is: do you think there is a need for organizing in Greensboro? Do you think there is a need for organizing on Guilford College campus? Is there a need for you to be part of something which is trying to change this community and the area in which you are living?"

Gerald Taylor — lead organizer for the Industrial Areas Foundation's Southeast region chapter — posed these and other questions in a preliminary discussion held with Guilford students and faculty on Feb. 17 in Bryan Jr. Auditorium to see whether Guilford has the drive and potential to become a new chapter of the IAF.

The IAF, America's oldest communityorganizing network, is an affiliation which enables communities to fight systematic injustice and social inequities through grassroots organizing.

"We move into communities by invitation only," said Taylor. "This step is intentional; it forces communities to organize around getting signatures for our invitation."

Sherry Giles, associate professor of justice and policy studies, organized the event. Giles received training by the IAF while she was working as a counselor in the public school system of Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I saw that organizing parents to address the issues that made it hard to raise their children in their neighborhoods gave (the parents) the confidence and skills to improve their lives and their communities," said Giles in an e-mail interview.

SEE "ORGANIZER" ON PAGE 3

This week online

VIDEOS

GNN with Ashley Lynch & Millie Carter

Nick Bunitsky and Mitchell Hamilton review "Unknown"

Justin Bieber by Lindsay Vanderhoogt

The Green Bean: Elm Street's eclectic coffee house

By Terah Kelleher

WWW.GUILFORDIAN.COM

OMICS

The Guilford Fuzz by, Elaine Kellogg