

UWORP...UWORP...UWORP! YOU NEED A DOCTOR

BY SHELBY SMITH
THE DOCTOR'S COMPANION

Imagine the atmosphere of monotony hanging heavily over a boring class you have in King Hall. You are just about to drift to sleep on top of your blank notebook when suddenly you hear the greatest sound in the universe:

Vworp ... vworp ... VWORP.

It is the blessed sound of the TARDIS. However, everyone else around you keeps saying that it is only the ventilation system.

But now there is evidence that the noise is indeed the famous blue time traveling machine as seen in the BBC series Doctor Who.

"I always thought it was just my mind playing tricks on me after all-nighters," said senior Adrienne Mattson-Perdue. "Now that other people have heard it too, I know it's real and I'm excited about it!"

Doctor Who fans, or "Whovians," all across campus are buzzing with excitement and questions. Who really is this 1000-plus year old Time Lord? Why would he be on campus? How have we not seen him yet?

Clearly, the Doctor has

Hello, sweetie. Have you seen any signs of the Doctor's presence? Please let The Guilfordian know on our Facebook page or on our website!

regenerated into a new form. He could be anyone on campus. The Doctor is notorious for blending in or going completely undercover, particularly at educational institutions.

His regenerations have progressively made him look younger. Therefore, it is possible he is either disguising himself as a student or younger staff member or instructor.

Most of the administration at Guilford has kept quiet about these recent inquiries and theories. A usually eager interviewee Aaron Fetrow was asked about the Doctor, only to reply with an alarmed face, "Doctor who?" before rushing back into his office.

President Kent Chabotar seemed to be the only official willing to speak with any sort of frankness with The Guilfordian.

"You can call me a coward, just don't call me a liar," he said. "All I can safely say is that if the Doctor is here, then there is certain danger ahead of us."

There have been subtle signs of this impending danger emerging around campus. In Binford, students have been complaining about mysterious cracks in the walls. Credible, though anonymous, members of the biology department have detected unidentified life forms in the lake. Music majors have been whispering about a drum-like beat consisting of four equal beats echoing throughout Dana Auditorium.

"I can't focus on any of my other music assignments when I hear it," said junior music major Taylor Seitz, not realizing that he was drumming that very same rhythm against his lap as he was being interviewed.

"If anything, I think the WiFi being faulty is a sign of trouble," said sophomore Patrick Withrow. "Daleks or Cybermen have been known to use that sort of stuff to take over the universe."

With this impending danger becoming clearer, the search for the Doctor has become crucial. It appears the administration has set its search for the mysterious Time Lord on British students, particularly those with innocuous pocket watches in the case that the Doctor is hiding away as a human for some reason.

No leads or names have been revealed due to a fear of fans within the campus community.

Despite any fears of potential danger, many students still welcome the idea of the Doctor being at Guilford.

"I'm definitely keeping my headphones off for this," says sophomore Cameron McDowell. "Who knows when I'll run into the guy?"

Whovians are advised to keep a travel bag handy in the case that you hear the sound of a landing TARDIS and to prepare themselves.

You never know. You may be chosen to begin the journey of a lifetime.

Frank Massey investigates the paranormal

GRAND AND GLORIOUS VICEROY

"I was sworn to secrecy," bellowed Frank Massey, IFP gifts discernment coordinator, during a briefing with students and faculty. "The FBI sent me here to investigate paranormal activity. You can call me a crazy a-hole. Just don't call me a liar."

It has recently been revealed that our own Frank Massey was hired by the FBI to investigate the ghosts, spirits, angels and demons on our beloved campus.

From the tales of trickery brought about by the little girl in Dana to the spirits who roam the narrow brick pathways of the quad, all have been proven to be true.

"I had no idea," said Max Carter, director of the Friends Center and campus ministry coordinator. "I mean, I knew Frank was gifted, but I never knew that he was hired by the government to look into our school. It's shocking news, but honestly I'm more interested in what he's found while he has been here."

Most students and faculty are alarmed by this breaking news but are also extremely curious in Massey's research and what that research has taught him.

"There are spirits that roam this campus and the woods surrounding it," said Massey. "The FBI sent me here because of the reports that have been sent from this campus in the past. All of these reports are true: the soldier and little girl in Dana, the battle of good versus evil regarding the angels and demons of Dana and New Garden, and the soldiers that roam the woods. If you open your eyes and let your mind be free, you will feel them and possibly see them as well."

One question that has recently been asked by the community of Guilford is "What would happen if Frank was not here?"

"If Agent Massey was not sent to Guilford College, the paranormal would be rampant," said Agent K, chief FBI paranormal investigator. "Your campus would be overrun by ghosts and spirits. They would take over your dorms and your classes and would eventually run your admissions office. Do not think twice about that. Massey is an interpreter for the spirit world, and without him, all would be lost."

Since we have learned this vital information, the faculty and staff have decided that Frank Massey will never leave Guilford College.

"Of course there are spirits on this campus," said Aaron Fetrow, vice president for student affairs and dean of students. "I have experienced the paranormal myself, and if Frank is the barrier between the spirit world and Guilford College, he is here to stay."

The Guilford College community mostly all had the same reaction as Fetrow.

"Frank is a great guy," stated sophomore Chandler Zirkle. "If he protects our college and is a 'warrior for Guilford' — a Quaker warrior of course — then he should just continue his work."

Massey has since continued his work as an investigator of the paranormal at Guilford and in the Greensboro area, and he continues to find more and more evidence. His evidence is leading in one direction and one direction only; we are not alone in this world, and we have so much to learn.

Campus Life staff members Aaron Fetrow, Erin Fox, Tammy Alt, Jim Hood and Steve Moran were caught making a ruckus in the Campus Life office, disturbing everyone trying to work. Therefore, Campbell House members James Copp, Daniel Fulbrecht, Zachary Kronisch and James O'Neill banned all further Campus Life parties.
